WAR GOODS ON GEORGIA SHIPS TAKEN

British Seize Cargoes
Destined for Germany and Hold Them for a Prize Court Hearing.

British authorities in the prosecution of the war on Germany yesterday seized cargoes of two American merchant ships, which gave Savannah as their home port, and held the goods for review by a British prize court.

Announcement of the action came from London late in the day.

The ships, both operated by the South Atlantic Steamship Company, were the Saccarappa, of 4,965 tons registry, and the Shickshinny, of 5,103 tons.

Chief seizures were phosphate rock, of which the Saccarappa was carrying 3,300 tons, and the Shickshinny, 1,350 tons.

Seize Scrap Metal.

Fourteen bales of scrap copper and unspecified quantities of cotton waste, gum and resin also were taken from the Saccarappa.

The Saccarappa sailed from Savannah about August 15, and the Shickshinny about August 31, officials of the company in Savannah said.

According to the dispatches the first-named vessel reached England September 4, and the other last Sunday.

It was learned from expert Atlanta sources that phosphate rock, while a contraband of war, is not useful in the manufacture of explosives. Its value lies in production of fertilizer to aid in raising crops for maintenance of troops. Its price ranges between $3.50 and $4 per ton.

Both vessels had cargoes for English ports, which were delivered in the regular course, but the phosphate rock and other material, destined for Hamburg, Germany, fell within the restrictions of the contraband list.

Vessels Not Held.

It was declared definitely by the Savannah steamship officials that the vessels themselves would not be interfered with in any way.

In Washington, the State Department, when informed of the seizures, said it did not at this time contemplate diplomatic action. An official declared Secretary Hull was studying these and other recent cases and had not yet formulated his policy with regard to them.

State Okays Mrs. Rhorer To Be Fulton Welfare Chief

Resignation of Dr. Huck
Reported by Deen, But He Denies It.

The State Department of Public Welfare announced yesterday that it had approved the selection of Mrs. Charlotte Rhorer as the new acting welfare director for Fulton county, succeeding Dr. William Huck.

State Director Braswell Deen said he had been informed officially that Dr. Huck had "resigned," effective October 1. Dr. Huck said he had "not resigned" and added that he had "no intention of resigning as far as I know."

Mrs. Rhorer said she had not been notified of her selection. At present she is acting director of the county welfare department's division of public assistance. Mrs. Rhorer said that any announcement of personnel changes would be made through the proper channels.

DR. C. M. SNELLING DIES AT ATHENS

Chancellor Emeritus
Gave 51 Years' Service to Georgia Education.

Dr. Charles Mercer Snelling, beloved chancellor emeritus of the University System of Georgia, died at 9:45 o'clock yesterday morning at his home in Athens. He was 77.

Stricken three weeks ago at his summer home in Mountain City, Dr. Snelling was brought to an Atlanta hospital for treatment. He remained at the hospital until about a week ago when he was removed to his Athens home.

Dr. Snelling was widely known throughout Georgia and the south. He had been associated with the University of Georgia in various capacities for 51 years.

Funeral Tomorrow.

Surviving are his widow, the former Miss Matilda Janet Morton, member of a prominent Athens family, and six sons, Dr. Pinckney W. Snelling, of Hartford, Conn.; Charles M. Snelling Jr., of Greenville, S. C.; Albert M. Snelling, of Moultrie; Dr. David Snelling, of Montgomery; John R. Snelling, of Atlanta; and Robert Snelling, of Athens.

'Capturing' Runaway Auto, Boy Patrol Saves Children

Fast thinking and quick action by two 12-year-old members of the Schoolboy Patrol who "captured" a runaway automobile averted a possible major tragedy yesterday as children were assembling for morning classes at the Peoples Street school.

William Lanier Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lanier, of 926 Oglethorpe avenue, and Lonnie Eskew, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Eskew, of 538 Ashby street, were heroes of the incident and are credited with preventing what might easily have been a serious accident.

An unoccupied automobile was parked on Peoples street just above the main crosswalk in front of the school and, according to police reports, had been insecurely braked. It suddenly began rolling and, gathering momentum rapidly, was headed directly for the crossing which at the moment was filled with children.

Sizing up the situation at a glance, William and Lonnie dashed for the car and climbed on opposite running boards. Frantic efforts to apply the brakes proved fruitless but between them they managed to twist the steering wheel so that the machine was maneuvered away from the crowd of children to a vacant lot where it was finally brought to a stop.

LAWMAKERS GATHER ON NEUTRALITY

Significant Document To Be Short; Vandenberg,
Holt Against Change;
Connally, Guffey for It.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19. (AP) — President Roosevelt disclosed today that he would go before congress on Thursday to deliver an address officially opening the historic contest over the neutrality law.

He began drafting that significant document—which is to be short because congress already has much information on the subject—as members of house and senate started arriving in the city for the special session.

Among those who reached the capital, Senators Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, and Holt, Democrat, West Virginia, immediately announced their opposition to changing the neutrality statute at this time, while Senators Connally, Democrat, Texas, and Guffey, Democrat, Pennsylvania, said they would support the administration's proposal that the embargo on arms shipments to European belligerents be repealed.

Mind Still Open.

Asserting that his mind was still open on that question, Senator Reynolds, Democrat, North Carolina, just returned from Europe, charged the administration had "fallen down miserably" in providing transportation for Americans stranded in war zones. The United States Manhattan on which he reached New York yesterday carried, he said, a large number of aliens, whose accommodations should have been occupied by American citizens.

With the special session scheduled to convene Thursday, a real influx of legislators and outpouring of statements on the neutrality issue is expected tomorrow.

Tomorrow, too, Mr. Roosevelt plans to hold his "national unity" conference at the White House on the administration's neutrality program.

To this gathering he has invited not only the Democratic leadership in congress, but the Republican leaders as well, and to this group he has added the names of Alf M. Landon and Colonel Frank Knox, the 1936 presidential and vice presidential candidate of the Republican party.

While the row was developing at the capital, other related developments were occurring in the city.

'Prepared To Wage 7-Year War'--Hitler

But Fuehrer Tells France and Britain That Germany Has 'No War Aims' Against Them; Says He Doesn't Want Ukraine.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

DANZIG, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler served notice on Britain and France today he was prepared to wage a seven-year war if necessary and asserted that Germany and Soviet Russia, Europe's "two greatest nations," would re-establish "law and order" in eastern Europe.

The Fuehrer in an hour and 14-minute speech told the western Allies—Britain and France—he had "no war aims" against them, but declared that Poland, as created by the Versailles treaty, "never again will rise."

Frenzied Welcome.

In one of his best oratorical efforts, Hitler spoke in the medieval Artushof as the crowning event of his first visit to Danzig since he brought the former Free City on the Baltic "back home into the Reich." The wildly heiling populace accorded him a frenzied welcome.

Fuehrer Hysterical.

Hitler at times appeared to be almost beside himself with hysterical excitement.

The collapse in Poland, he asserted, was complete, with 700,000 Polish prisoners, including 2,000 officers and many generals, taken by the Germans.

Dwelling at length on Nazi relations with Britain and France, he said "I have always endeavored to bring about friendly relations."

"In the west and south," he declared, "Germany made important concessions hoping to bring about definite peace in Europe. We believe we would have been successful had downright war agitators not always upset our efforts."

Says He Has Right.

Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia are in agreement that the post-Versailles Poland shall not be revived, he asserted, adding that they were the only ones "entitled to re-establish law and order in eastern Europe."

Taking notice of British assertions that Germany was preparing for a 7-year war, Hitler said: "I am not prepared to wage a 7-year war. I am prepared to wage a 7-year war if necessary."

HITLER PROCLAIMS REICH AND RUSSIA WILL RULE POLAND

Fuehrer Answers British Preparations To Fight 3 Years With Statement "That Depends On Us" and Declares Germany Is Prepared for a 7-Year War; Reds Take Wilno.

By The Associated Press.

Adolph Hitler yesterday pledged Germany to a finish fight against Great Britain and France and warned these nations that for every bomb thrown on German towns he would answer with five or ten.

He said Germany is ready for at least a seven-year war, pronounced the Polish republic dead and declared Germany and Russia—"Europe's two greatest nations"—would "re-establish law and order" over the Polish people and the east.

The German leader's first address since the war started contained an implied bid for peace on his terms. He said Germany has "no war aims" against Britain or France.

France and England emphatically and quickly replied "No."

The speech brought this French commentary:

"France and Britain will not let the dictatorship of Hitler condemn the world to slavery and ruin of all moral values and the destruction of liberty."

Across the English channel, authoritative quarters in London reiterated Britain's "No" to any peace offer, while an official communique said Hitler's Danzig speech was "full of crass misstatements."

The communique reviewed "the tale of Herr Hitler's broken promises" and said "he can scarcely expect Great Britain to believe that German aspirations are limited, and that Germany has no further aspirations in the west."

French sources close to Premier Daladier's government said French envoys had been instructed to inform nations to which they were accredited that the Allies are determined to push the war until the Nazi regime is crushed.

Speaking in Danzig, Hitler disclaimed Russia's Ukraine, which in the past he has said he would like to have, and pronounced the new German-Russian partnership in effect a business relationship.

He said:

"Russia remains what it is, and Germany will remain what it is. But both regimes see clearly that neither the Russian nor the German regimes want to sacrifice even a single man for the western democracies."

Terming Britain's blockade "a weapon against women and children," he said the British "should have no illusions. The time could rapidly come when we apply a weapon against which we cannot be attacked. Let us hope that they then do not suddenly remember humanity."

Russia moved ahead in Poland. Reports reached Stockholm that the Soviet navy had blockaded Estonia's coast, putting the Tallinn

GERMANS CRUSH POLES ON BZURA, CAPTURE 50,000

German Army Reports Taking 'Immense' Booty in Major Battle; Gdynia Unit Is Holding Out.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The German army, still opposed in government-abandoned Poland by widely scattered forces, reported today the capture of 50,000 prisoners and "immense booty" after crushing a Polish army in one of the biggest battles on the eastern front.

The command's announcement of victory on the Bzura river west of Warsaw came as military activity was reported resumed at Warsaw and a force of between 2,000 and 3,000 Polish troops waged a desperate fight against heavy odds west of German-conquered Gdynia, once Poland's seaport.

Repeated Onslaughts. Some captives taken in repeated German onslaughts against the little contingent near Gdynia were quoted as saying they were "waiting for the British to arrive." The fight in the Gdynia sector was raging furiously when Fuehrer Adolf Hitler arrived at Danzig for his triumphal entry into that city.

The German communique said "dissolution and capitulation of scattered or encircled remnants of the Polish army are progressing rapidly."

"The battle of the Bzura River is over."

"Up to now, 50,000 war prisoners have been taken and immense booty captured. The final amount cannot be estimated."

Heavy Losses. Losses were believed heavy on both sides.

The tersely-worded announcement referred to a nine-day engagement along the Bzura north of Lodz, a textile manufacturing center and the second city in size in Poland.

Lodz is about 75 miles southwest of Warsaw and the German triumph in the Lodz area apparently relieved thousands of Nazi troops for the attack on the Polish capital, from which the government of President Ignace Mościcki fled several days ago.

Politics 'Adjourned' in U.S. As Republicans, Democrats Voice Same War Attitude

GALLUP POLL

The following is one of a series of surveys on America's reaction to the outbreak of war in Europe. Not available in 1914, the new science of public opinion measurement will provide the nation's leaders, and the public, with impartial facts on what the people themselves believe their best interests to be.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.
Copyright, 1939.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 19.—America's attitude toward the European conflict, as measured in surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion, cuts sharply across party lines. Democrats and Republicans are so closely akin in sentiment that the chances of fighting the next political campaign chiefly on war issues seems unlikely, unless events radically change the present situation.

Since the outbreak of war, the Institute has polled the nation on nearly a dozen different issues connected with the war, and has found that the attitude of rank-and-file Republican voters is substantially the same as that of Democratic voters—a condition which contrasts strikingly with party differences over important domestic issues.

Politicians peering into the future and wondering to what extent war issues will become party issues are likely to find that, so far as the public is concerned, politics has in truth been "adjourned," at least for the moment.

The actual comparisons of party sentiment follow:

"Should we send our army and navy abroad to fight Germany?"

	YES	NO
Democrats	18%	82%
Republicans	13%	87%

"If it looks within the next few months as if England and France might be defeated, should the United States declare war on Germany and send our troops abroad?"

	YES	NO
Democrats	46%	54%
Republicans	42%	58%

"Should the United States allow American ships to carry goods anywhere, or should our ships be kept out of war zones?"

	Keep Out	Allow Anywhere
Democrats	83%	15%
Republicans	83%	17%

"Should the United States allow its citizens to travel on ships of countries which are now at war?"

	YES	NO
Democrats	17%	83%
Republicans	19%	81%

"Should the constitution of the United States be changed to require a national vote before congress could draft men for war overseas?"

	YES	NO
Democrats	47%	53%
Republicans	52%	48%

.....

President Roosevelt's foreign policy, many previous surveys have found, is one New Deal policy which receives the support of a substantial number of Republicans.

First early indications of polling since the outbreak of the war show that the decline in his popularity which was noted in a survey a month ago has been halted.

The question still remaining is how war in Europe will affect the President's chances for election to a third term if he runs. A new survey is now being conducted to test whether this sentiment has changed with the actual outbreak of war.

GERMANS, BULGARIANS

SOFIA, Sept. 19.—(AP)—A German trade delegation arrived today to discuss details of German-Bulgarian trade exchanges for 1940.

Well-informed quarters said the German mission was asking an immediate increase in the volume of Bulgarian export of foodstuffs to Germany.

The German delegation denied categorically that the Reich had promised Turkey a free hand in Bulgaria in return for Turkish neutrality.

REDS SEIZE WILNO, LIQUIDATE ESTATES

Peasants Told To Take the Land and Turn Cattle Into Landlords' Pastures.

By WITT HANCOCK.
MOSCOW, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The Soviet Russian army rolling westward through Poland was reported authoritatively tonight to have occupied the city of Wilno, about 85 miles into northeastern Poland, and to be approaching the industrial city of Lwow, some 90 miles from the frontier in the south-east.

Just how far into Poland the red armies planned to go was not definitely known, but it was understood the invasion probably would halt on a line running roughly from Wilno to Lwow.

Eject Poles. A communique from the Soviet general staff reported that Russian forces continued to "eject troops of the Polish army" as they advanced westward.

A dispatch to the army newspaper, Red Star, disclosed that the process of liquidating huge estates in the Ukraine and White Russia already was under way.

Army commanders were reported to be instructing peasants to "take the land for the people," and to "turn your cattle into the landlords' pastures."

Tass, official news agency, said that the advance of the Russian armies was received by joyous crowds which lined the roads and that girls decked the tanks and horses with flowers. The agency reported "stirring meetings" of the populace and Soviet army units.

Lightning Advance. "We advanced at such lightning speed," Tass reported, "that all bridges on our way remained intact and telephone, telegraph lines and power stations are working normally."

It was reported in diplomatic circles that the Lithuanian minister to Moscow had opened negotiations in an effort to have the Russians and Germans return Wilno to Lithuania. (The city was occupied by the Poles after the World War. Lithuania considers the city her ancient capital.)

All-American Scholars Have Averages Above 93

Oglethorpe University's "brain team" took a tip from the football players and went into a huddle yesterday as they arrived on the campus to begin a novel educational experiment. Beginning with Fred Goss, of Proctor, Vt. (lower right, with glasses), and reading clockwise, they are Miles Carlsen, of Rigby, Idaho; Edward Golibab, of Rochester, N. Y.;

Morey Gephart, of San Antonio, Texas; Edgar Vallette, of Shreveport, La.; John Goldthwait, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Basil Stewart Jr., of Miami, Fla.; Kenneth McKay, of Baltimore, Md.; Victor Nelson, of Akron, Ohio; John Datsch, of Canton, Ohio; John Meacham Jr., of Scooba, Miss.; and Keith Lane, of Mt. Air, New Mexico.

Dr. Jacobs' Oglethorpe 'Brain Team' Starts Career With 'Skull Practice'

The 12 Carefully Selected Students, Who Will Be Surper-Educated in 6 Years, Are Given Vitamins and a Lecture as to What Is Expected of Them.

By LUKE GREENE.

Twelve solemn and slightly baffled young men arrived on the campus of Oglethorpe University yesterday to become the "human guinea pigs" in an educational experiment which the ultra-scientific Dr. Thorne Jacobs thinks may revolutionize modern colleges and universities.

Briefly, the doctor is going to attempt to cram into their brains an overdose of education. If they survive, he hopes in six years to turn out a group of super-men who can teach any course offered at the university.

Named Brain Team.

The doctor frowns at the idea of calling them "guinea pigs." He has all kinds of high-sounding names for them but prefers to call them his "brain team." He likens them to a football team.

At the first skull practice of the "brain team" yesterday Head Mentor Jacobs outlined some of the things he is going to expect of his young charges.

Of course, it should be explained at the outset, that these young men are not ordinary students. They represent every section of the country and were carefully plucked from students in the upper 10 per cent of their classes. Not one of them has a high school average below 93 and the highest is 99.9.

It is evident, therefore, that the doctor has good material to start with. His success, it seems, depends upon the enforcement of a rigorous set of training rules.

Diet Important. Dr. Jacobs has everything whittled down to a fine point. He will even prescribe the kind of food they eat. They must have a well-balanced diet—so much vitamin A and B. If they should get too much pork or not enough lettuce their brainwork might be retarded.

Although they won't be preserved in alcohol, these young martyrs to the cause of education will be sufficiently bottled up to prevent the usual freedom enjoyed by other students.

They will not be allowed to join fraternities. Their extra-curricular activities will be reduced to a minimum. They will get up at 7 o'clock in the morning and study until 11 o'clock at night. Their dates will be restricted to a period from noon on Saturday to 6 o'clock on Sunday night. They will live together under the leadership of one of their number and will not be permitted to smoke or drink.

To Do Double Work. "They won't have time for such things," Dr. Jacobs tells you. "They are here to do about twice as much work as the average student."

Dr. Jacobs has an idea that there is too much of the "country club" in the colleges of today. Young men and women go to college just for the social life, he says.

When asked if he thought too much would be crowded into the lives of the youngsters, the doctor replied that only time would tell.

The young men didn't say much as they sat around the luncheon table munching the special dishes Dr. Jacobs had concocted for them. They seemed a bit amazed as to what it was all about.

But, no doubt, the young men will go down in Oglethorpe history along with the Crypt of Civilization, Dr. Jacobs' previous scientific brainchild.

Locked in the crypt is everything characteristic of the present generation. It is not to be opened for several thousand years, and Dr. Jacobs intends for future generations to know about his "guinea pigs," for he plans to place a picture of them in the crypt.

QUEEN REAFFIRMS DUTCH NEUTRALITY

Parliament Opens in The Hague; Allies' Envoys Avoid German.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 19.—(AP)—British and French envoys kept an aisle between them and the German envoy today at the opening of parliament before which Queen Wilhelmina expressed pity for war victims and reaffirmed the Netherlands' neutrality.

Envoys customarily sit together. The Queen, who rode to parliament in a historic golden coach with Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard, read her throne speech herself, holding a lorgnette throughout.

Two Socialist ministers sat on cabinet benches for the first time. Six National Socialist members of parliament greeted one another with outstretched hands in Nazi fashion.

"I rejoice that our friendly relations with all powers continue unimpaired," the Queen said. "This refers especially to our relations to those neutral countries with which we have established closer contact in previous periods."

She expressed the conviction that better international relations may be established by peaceful negotiations.

POLES IN WARSAW STILL DEFY NAZIS

Radio Broadcast Tells Story of Ruin Resulting From 12-Day-Old Siege.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Warsaw's defiance of the German army's demand for surrender was broadcast again by the Polish capital's radio tonight after a day-long shelling and bombardment. The announcer in a tired voice recited in English a story of devastation resulting from the 12-day-old siege.

"Warsaw presents a very pitiful sight," he said. "Buildings, monuments, museums and art galleries are in ruins. We will fight to the last drop and never surrender."

The German army delivered an ultimatum to the Warsaw population, dropping leaflets from airplanes, last Saturday, ordering it to evacuate the capital under threat of bombardment. The ultimatum expired Sunday afternoon.

Polish authorities rejected the ultimatum.

Prominent Hungarians today formed a committee to aid Polish refugees.

One committee, of which Madame Nicholas Horthy, wife of Hungary's regent, was reported to be patroness, arranged for Hungarians to take Polish women and children into their homes for the duration of the war.

Frontier reports said two Polish infantry battalions crossed from Sianki and Uzok and were received with honors by Hungarian border guards.

Publicity Would Lessen Fear Of Cancer, Is Steiner Belief

Clinic Thinks Information on Symptoms Useful in Checking It.

Because a cure for cancer is not known is no reason why probable causes of cancer should not be publicized to take from its victims a fear of the disease and encourage them to consult their doctors. This is the view of scientists at Steiner clinic, one of the outstanding institutions for the treatment of cancer in this country, who yesterday, under the cloak of anonymity had some interesting things to say about studies of the probable causes of cancer in other lands.

Because their professional code of ethics forbids doctors to permit use of their names in matters discussed in print their ideas were issued under the collective names of the Steiner clinic staff and disclosed results of some interesting research:

Hindus Susceptible.

Cancer among Hindus is more prevalent in the stomach and then on the outside of the skin. Doctors explain that nights are cold and that the Hindus carry charcoal pots swung around their necks and wrap their robes around the pots to keep warm. Hence the constant heat irritated the skin, causing a cancerous growth.

In Japan, a vast majority of the cancer patients are men. That is due, doctors believe, to the fact that the women do not eat at the same time the men do. The women prepare the food and serve the meal, usually rice, to the male members of the family while it is boiling hot. The men eat it hot, and have cancer of the throat. Women, who wait until the men have completed their meal to eat, are not so susceptible.

Betel Nut Leaves Source.
Natives of the Dutch East Indies have cancer of the mouth, caused, it is said, because they chew betel nut leaves, which are a constant irritation even though the natives like the tangy taste.

English longshoremen smoke clay pipes with clay stems, so short and such good conductors of heat that their mouths are kept heated constantly. This irritates them and they are much more likely to have cancer than other native persons who do not smoke pipes of that type.

Early diagnosis is still of paramount importance in the treatment of cancer, and too much stress cannot be placed on it, the authorities added.

Cites Dangerous Areas.

Asserting that 90 per cent of the persons treated at Steiner for the disease are affected from the wrist downward, or from the neck upward, they cautioned any person in doubt as to the source of any blood from any opening of the body to consult a physician at once.

"I am rather disheartened about ever being able to diagnose cancer of the stomach until it has reached such a stage that it can't be cured," one expert said. "We have tried every means known to medical science and none of them are accurate."

Blood Tests Tried.

"There have been developed within recent years certain tests with blood. A few drops of the patient's blood is placed in a crystal of copper chloride, but it is not an accurate test because the cancer, so far as we are able to ascertain, is not a germ. It is a growth. Only germs change the blood stream in its early stages so far as we know."

"Cancer seems to be a growth caused by tissue cells gone wild, and if allowed to proceed, will decentralize, attach themselves to

Tampa Reveals Candidacy for Governorship.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—(UP)—Burton Schoepf, 48, a Tampa, Fla., businessman, tonight announced his candidacy for the governorship of Florida.

After a conference with Dr. Francis E. Townsend, leader of the $200-a-month old age pension plan, Schoepf said he would enter the May primaries as a Townsendite on the Democratic ticket.

other organs or parts of the body and begin a new growth. "Since the decentralizing process does not begin until the cancer has reached an advanced stage, we have not yet been able to find a medium to detect it unless it is reasonably obvious."

If it is in the throat, other opening of the body, or on the surface, it can be detected; but if it is in the internal organs, the stomach, the kidney, liver or lung, it is so difficult to diagnose in the early stages that it is extremely dangerous.

Ask Your Doctor.
"If one has a growth that he is not sure of, he should consult a good doctor immediately, and that seems to be the only safe procedure at this time."

Staff members pointed out that the DuPonts are spending large sums on research, and that the government is attempting to correlate activities on cancer research throughout the country at the National Health Institute, near Washington.

They expressed the hope that a definite early diagnosis will be found and that more effective treatment will result, but until now early treatment is the only safe way to prevent disaster once cancer has been diagnosed in its early stages.

Roaches Infected Rats.

Dr. Febiger, of Brussels, Belgium, learned that rats in a certain sugar warehouse were dying of cancer. He investigated, and found that the rats ate roaches. Analyses showed that the roaches had little worms in their thigh muscles, and that when the rats ate the roaches, the worms emerged during the process of digestion, attacked the walls of the rats' stomachs and caused cancer. Rats were infected by roaches after that almost at will.

SCHWAB'S FUNERAL SET FOR TOMORROW

Flags at All Bethlehem Steel Plants Half-Staffed in His Memory.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Charles M. Schwab, whose name for a generation was synonymous with steel, will be buried Thursday in the Gate of Heaven cemetery, Pleasantville, Westchester county.

The funeral plans announced today by his brother, E. H. Schwab, include a solemn high requiem mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral. Schwab, 77, died Monday night at his Park avenue home of coronary thrombosis. He was stricken in London during the summer and returned August 31.

Today flags on all Bethlehem

Steel plants were half-staffed in memory of Schwab, chairman of the corporation. E. G. Grace, president, paid tribute to him as "a pioneer in realizing the importance of the human element in industry."

All possible operations of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation will stop for three minutes at 9 a. m. (Atlanta time) on Thursday, when his funeral is held.

RATE PARLEY URGED BY COMMISSIONERS

Seek Joint Action by 11 Dixie States in Freight Discrimination Fight.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 19.—(AP)—Joint action by 11 southern states in attempting the overthrow of "discriminatory" freight rates was urged today by the Southeastern Association of Public Utility and Railroad Commissioners.

The southeastern group invited commissioners from Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma to meet with it at a date and site to be announced soon to make definite plans for the presentation of evidence on class rate structures before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

This meeting will be held the day before a meeting of the 11 governors involved, to be called by Georgia's Governor Rivers, chairman of the Southern Governors' Conference. Rivers said he would call the governors "within two weeks," with Birmingham likely to be chosen as the meeting site.

Whether the southeastern and southwestern states, in different freight territories, will present a joint case or separate petitions before the ICC is a question to be discussed at the joint meeting which will precede the governors' conference.

The Southeastern Association also attacked present freight rates as "discriminatory" to the south in a resolution adopted today.

Class rate hearings will follow the effort of the southern governors for commodity rate revisions, now pending before the ICC. Hearings in the commodity rate case were held in Birmingham and Buffalo, N. Y., last year.

Freight rate structures will be considered here tomorrow at a meeting of the Southern Traffic League and the Southeastern Shippers' Advisory Board.

BRITISH TEXT WHICH GIVES LIE TO HITLER, POINT BY POINT

NAZI RULER'S OWN WORDS ARE USED TO CONFOUND HIM

Epecially Contradictory Are Old and New References to Reds—the 'Baccilli' of Yesterday.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The text of the British official statement replying to Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech follows:

Herr Hitler's speech is full of the crass misstatements which usually fall from his lips and to which the world has now become accustomed.

It is surprising that a man in his responsible position should venture to convict himself so palpably out of his own mouth.

On Polish Relations.

Thus for example we now hear from Herr Hitler:

"At that time there lived in Poland a man of energy and action. I tried in common with Marshal Pilsudski to find a solution that would secure peace. In this we put aside the Versailles treaty and attempted to reach a temporary solution."

"After the death of Marshal Pilsudski however, the mortal fight against all Germans in Poland began anew. This fight naturally embittered and ruined the relations between the two nations."

"It was possible for us only with difficulty to look on while the German minority was barbarously ill-treated. The world, which is always shaken to the depths when a Polish Jew who has recently emigrated to Germany is deported, remained dumb in the face of this ill-treatment."

Why World Was "Dumb."

So says Herr Hitler.

The world remained dumb in the face of this ill-treatment for the very good reasons that from the time of Marshal Pilsudski's death until this spring Herr Hitler represented his relations with Poland as excellent.

No word was said in Germany of the maltreatment of Germans in Poland. On the contrary this is how Herr Hitler himself described his friendship for Poland.

In the reichstag on May 21, 1935:

"We recognize the Polish state as the home of a great patriotic nation with the understanding and the cordial friendship of candid nationalists."

In the reichstag on February 20, 1938:

"In the fifth year which followed the coming into force of the first great international conference concluded by the Reich, we state with genuine admiration that our relations with that state with which we had perhaps the greatest antagonism, are not only characterized by a détente, but that in the course of the past years, these relations resulted in a more and more friendly drawing together."

"Danzig No Menace."

"I know full well that this is chiefly due to the fact that at that time there was not a western parliamentarian in Warsaw but a Polish marshal whose commanding personality realized the importance for Europe of such a détente between Germany and Poland."

The value of this was questioned by many at the time but it has now passed the test and I may well say that since the League of Nations has ceased its continuous efforts at disturbance in Danzig and appointed a new commissioner, a man of personality, this most dangerous place for the peace of Europe has entirely lost its menacing significance."

"The Polish state respects the national conditions in this country and that city and Germany respects Polish rights. Thus it was possible to find the way to an understanding which, emanating from Danzig, in spite of the aspersions of many mischief makers, has succeeded in removing all friction between Germany and Poland and made it possible to work together in true amity."

"10 Years of Peace."

Once again in this sport palast on September 26, 1938, Herr Hitler said "Poland was ruled by a man and not by a democracy. With his collaboration it was possible to bring about in less than one year an agreement which to begin with excluded the danger of a clash for a period of 10 years. We are all convinced that this agreement will result in a lasting peace. We realize that there are two nations which must live side by side and neither of which is in a position to eliminate the other."

"A state with 33,000,000 inhabitants will always strive to have an outlet to the sea. It was therefore necessary to find a way to an understanding. This way has been found and will be consolidated. . . . This was really a peaceful action which is worth more than the whole of the babbling at

Lives 100 Years, 77 of Them in Isle In Gulf of Mexico

DEER ISLAND, Miss., Sept. 19. (AP)—Surrounded by her own eight children and most of the 25 girls she adopted a long time ago, Mrs. Harriet Aken today finished celebration of her hundredth birthday on this Gulf of Mexico island which has been her home for 77 years.

So many friends and relatives rowed across Mississippi sound yesterday to extend greetings that she declared a two-day anniversary and had the candles lighted again today on numerous birthday cakes sent her.

Born in near-by Pascagoula, Miss., the centenarian became the bride of Peter Baker at the age of 12. In 1862 he took her to the island where he cut down and hewed timber to make the home she thinks is still good enough. There she bore eight children, and then began adopting babies, always preferring girls. She took in 25.

Clearly recollecting events of four American and a great many other wars, Mrs. Aken shares the British opinion "Hitlerism must go."

the palace of the League of Nations in Geneva.

He returned to the present speech. Herr Hitler asks further on with reference to his proposals for a settlement: "I do not know in what state of mind the Polish government could have been to reject such proposals."

The answer is that the Polish government had before their eyes the shameful betrayal of the solemn assurances given by the German government at Munich. They knew that these demands were only the preliminary to further exactions.

If Herr Hitler had wished to inspire confidence in his word he should have been less reckless with his earlier promises.

"No Further Ambitions."

"Germany has no further territorial ambitions in Europe," was an undertaking which had been broken too flagrantly and too often. The tale of Herr Hitler's ambitions is so long that he can scarcely expect Great Britain to believe that German aspirations are limited and that Germany has no further aspirations in the west.

And now compare what Herr Hitler tells us of Russia with what he told us when it was Herr von Ribbentrop's mission to persuade Great Britain of the Russian peril.

This is what he says now:

"We have found that it is in the best interests of both our nations to have an understanding with each other. Thus the British as well as the unlimited world political aspirations of Germany is finally contracted. We shall never again fight a war in the interests of the western democracies. Make a note of that, my English gentlemen."

On Russia of Yore.

This is what he said then (in the Reichstag on January 30, 1937): "Bolshevism is the doctrine of world revolution, of world destruction. . . . As far as Germany is concerned I do not want to leave any doubt as to the following:

"1. We look upon Bolshevism as upon an intolerable danger to the world."

"2. We shall try and keep this danger away from the German Volk (people) by every means at our command."

"3. We are, therefore, endeavoring to make Germany as immune as possible from this contagion."

"For this it is necessary that we should avoid all close contacts with the bearers of these poisonous bacilli. . . . I request the German Volk to avoid all contacts and relations with these international parasites and consequently it will never occur that one will see me dining and winning with them. Furthermore, any treaty links between Germany and Russia, Bolshevism, Russia, would be without any value whatsoever."

Again at the Nuremberg party rally on the September 14, 1937: "I reject most emphatically to be joined up with those whose programme is the destruction of Europe and who do not even try to conceal this programme to refuse to collaborate with such elements does not mean to isolate oneself but to secure oneself."

Again, in the Reichstag on February 20, 1938:

"There is only one state with which we have never sought close relationships and with which we do not want to have any close relationships. I mean Soviet Russia."

"We must look upon Bolshevism as upon the incarnation of the destructive qualities of human nature, and we do even more than ever before."

Not Against Women.

There is no question of Great Britain waging war, as Herr Hitler declares, on German women and children.

The German government have already declared that there are ample stocks of food in Germany, but the restriction of the import of raw materials is not a measure of which the German government can legitimately complain.

Finally, Herr Hitler's account of the circumstances attending the outbreak of the war is a travesty on the facts.

He was determined on war and hoped to lead the Great Britain would not fulfill her treaty obligations to Poland.

It was only two days after the invasion of Poland, when no reply had been received to the British communication, that an ultimatum was addressed to the German government.

An authorized interview with John Smith, 19, who dropped the first British bomb of the war disclosed the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee was the principal victim of the raid on Kiel September 4.

Chamberlain To Speak.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, who has asserted repeatedly that "Hitlerism must be smashed" if there is to be lasting peace in Europe, will give his third report on the war to parliament tomorrow. Considerable interest was centered on his appearance in the light of Hitler's statement in his speech today that Germany and Soviet Russia would determine Poland's future.

"It is surprising that a man in his responsible position should venture to convict himself so palpably out of his own mouth," the official British statement said of Hitler.

"Shameful Betrayal."

Commenting on Hitler's statement that he could not understand why the Polish government rejected his proposals the 3,000-word statement said:

"The answer is that the Polish government had before their eyes the shameful betrayal of the solemn assurances given by the German government at Munich."

Only the preliminary to future exactions.

"If Herr Hitler had wished to inspire confidence in his word he should have been less reckless with his earlier promises. 'Germany has no further territorial ambitions in Europe,' asserting 'all the world is admiring your courage.'"

Not War on Children.

Referring to Hitler's charge that Britain through its blockade was waging war on women and children, the statement said:

"There is no question of Great Britain waging war, as Herr Hitler declares, on German women and children. The German government has already declared that there are ample stocks of food in Germany, but the restriction of the import of raw materials is not a measure of which the German government can legitimately complain."

Finally, Herr Hitler's account of the circumstances attending the outbreak of war is a travesty of the facts. He was determined on war and hoped to the last that Great Britain would not fulfill her treaty obligations to Poland.

"It was only two days after the invasion of Poland when no reply had been received to the British communication that an ultimatum was addressed to the German government."

Broadcast To Poles.

Text of Reply From France To Hitler's Address at Danzig

PARIS, Wednesday, Sept. 20.—(UP)—The text of the French government's reply to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech:

"On the day following the success which he is exploiting in blustering fashion and which he owes to Soviet betrayal, Chancellor Hitler pronounced a sad plea, destined, as he himself admitted, for use on internal German opinion. Hitler felt the need for justifying himself to the German people for the frightful catastrophe into which he dragged them."

"All he did was to repeat with banality and increased vulgarity the usual fabrications of German propaganda. Nothing was lacking: Neither lies regarding Polish aggression and cruelty nor the usual customs regarding the Versailles Treaty, nor the traditional maneuver disassociating France and England, nor attempts at intimidation, nor insults, nor traditional threats to an adversary, nor the trampling of a victim."

Lying Charged.

"As in all of Hitler's speeches, lies abound in this speech."

"The Fuehrer repeated that the causes of the war were due to the English guarantees given Poland. He wants to hide from his people that the guarantee is a direct consequence of the disavowal of his word and the violation of his engagements; of the destruction of Czechoslovakia following that of Austria and the occupation of Prague by German troops."

"German aggression against Poland, he explained, was for the sole necessity of regaining Danzig."

"He also affirmed he would never permit Poland to be resuscitated. Therefore Danzig was merely a pretext. In reality Hitler wanted to destroy Poland, destruction which in itself is nothing more than another step towards the domination of Europe."

Hitler Surprised.

"Hitler was surprised at the treatment to which the Polish government, according to Nazi propaganda, submitted the German minority. It is the story of the Sudetenland. Hitler, however, doesn't say anything about the abominable atrocities of which the Polish civilian populations were the victims and against which President Roosevelt protested, based on authentic documents."

Paper Quoted.

"The Italian paper Gazzetta del Popolo since has done justice to this argument saying, 'The reversals of the Polish army are explained in part by the fact it was unable to execute normal general mobilization in Poland due to the Reich's lightning-like offensive' in the September 17 issue of that newspaper."

"Finally, Hitler feels astonished that France and Great Britain are warring against him and not against the German people."

"France and Great Britain will not permit a Hitler victory to condemn the world to slavery and to ruin all moral values and destroy liberty."

SQUALUS DISASTER THEORY TEST SET

Sister Ship To Be Used in Trial; Press Praised.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 19. (UP)—The naval court of inquiry tomorrow will re-enact the operation which probably sent 26 men to their deaths when the submarine Squalus sank May 23.

The test will be made aboard the ill-starred submarine's sister ship, U. S. S. Sculpin, berthed at the navy yard. The board will operate the main induction valve in various ways and see what effect it has on signal lights which indicate if all is in readiness for a dive.

Commander A. I. McKee estimated that reconditioning the Squalus would cost $1,400,000.

Meanwhile, Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, in a report to the Navy Department, praised the press for its handling of the story of the Squalus disaster and salvage work, it was announced tonight.

His words were broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Partial Text of Fuehrer's Boastful Address At Danzig, in Which He Pledged Fight to Finish

DANZIG, Sept. 19.—(AP)—(By Radio)—The following is a partial text of today's speech by Adolf Hitler, as transcribed by the National Broadcasting Company:

Mr. Gauleiter, Danzigers and Germans: This hour is not only momentous for you but also for me, your Fuehrer. I am now on the soil which has been German for the past 1,000 years, and moreover, which from now on remains German for all time to come.

At the end of the last World War everybody felt certain in the belief that previously existing impossible conditions would forever be banished. This belief has been shattered by a group of people.

The Versailles treaty, which had been brought about by this group of people, did not settle a single problem. They came to forget, however, as time went by, that they would eventually face a united people of approximately 82,000,000 Germans. Past events permit us to say that we have lost all confidence in the promises and statements of the so-called leaders of the Democratic nations.

One is entitled to think that the criminals of Versailles were entirely bereft of all reason. Our country was the chief sufferer from this Versailles madness.

Poland Enlarged From Germany.

There is one thing which I must make clear: all the provinces which were taken away from Germany in 1918 and given to Poland were German in the truest sense of the word. Poland was enlarged at the expense and at the cost of the German Reich.

The Poles, on the other hand, were unable to administer the districts they so wrongly acquired. Everywhere we have found the traces of this Polish mismanagement. Poland has never been a Democracy. A consumptive, thin, upper class rules the country in conjunction with pure, unadulterated police power.

Culture incapable of carrying on and perpetuating the noble traditions of a great nation inherent in the provinces which she annexed.

There was a man—a Pole—by the name of Pilsudski who did appreciate the issues at stake, but he died before he could do so. His death the situation rapidly deteriorated. The German minorities began to be mistreated in the most barbaric manner.

The world at large has been deaf to the injustice and to the cruelties inflicted upon our minorities. For a long time we had to tolerate these insults inflicted upon us by a far inferior state.

Names Two Difficulties.

In particular there were two principal difficulties. First there was a city—Danzig—which the Poles, by all means at their command, tried to turn into a Polish city. Secondly, there was the question of the corridor separating a complete German province from the rest of the Reich.

I wonder what England and France might have done in a similar situation.

Endless propositions were made, most of them utterly intolerable. But finally, in my sincere endeavor to save Germany—and also Poland—from the horrors of war, I myself did make certain proposals which were rejected in toto. I wonder what the state of mind of the leaders has been since they thus rejected by proposals.

Not only did they reject my reasonable demands but they tried to make it appear as though certain German provinces were, in fact Polish. This view was brazenly proclaimed also by a Polish leader who has at this time already deserted the Polish army.

One wonders whose madness it was that so deluded the Polish nation. They were told to fight; they were told to resist; and they were also told that assistance would be given to them if their own resources should prove insufficient to wage the coming war.

I have previously warned against the fact that there are certain men in various nations—men like Churchill—who are able to brazenly urge the advisability of war. My statements were attacked all over the world. The view seems to be entertained in democratic nations that it is permissible to advocate war and to incite to violence.

In the totalitarian states, however, it is supposed to be a crime to take merely protective measures.

Until the very last moment I thought and tried to prove that it might still be possible to bring such dangerous men to their senses. For two days, upon one occasion, I sat in Berlin waiting for any reasonable reply to my proposals, but none came.

With unbelievable patience I have tried to solve our difficulties by peaceful means. Again and again I tried peaceful means. Peace could have been saved on so many of these occasions.

Mussolini did his best to assist me in this worthwhile cause. But England failed to see the issue in our light. The English thought—erroneously—that our Reich was still the country it used to be.

Ultimatums Resented.

But the Germany of today no longer is a country to whom ultimatum can be dictated.

If Poland went to war it was only because she was driven into war. Poland did choose to fight, but the result has been a bitter disappointment to that nation. Impossible lies and falsehoods have been told during the course of the struggle. Stories of German cruelties, atrocities—yes and even of German inferiority. And yet it has helped them not a bit. They have been defeated and annihilated at every turn until they were wiped out.

Batches of prisoners have been taken. Yesterday it was 50,000, today 70,000, and I don't know how many prisoners there will be taken tomorrow.

The German soldiers have carried on magnificently. Our army has not only been masterly, it has actually proven itself a master supreme.

In this moment of our victory we shall be generous to the vanquished Polish army. In many cases they have fought valiantly. At this moment we have taken approximately 300,000 Polish prisoners.

Poles Accused of Cruelty.

On the other hand, I must speak to you of Polish cruelties visited upon our German minorities. Feet and hands were chopped off, eyes were gouged out, and yet not one protest has been forthcoming from the western statesmen.

From the beginning I gave orders to conduct a humane warfare. Still the western statesmen must not think that this condition can go on forever. If they want things differently they can have what they ask for.

In 18 days we have liquidated Poland, and now, for the protection of its own minorities, Russia has marched into certain sections of Poland.

The Russian action and the German-Russian understanding have been labeled by Britain as a perfidy. I want to make it clear at this point that as far as we are concerned, Germany will remain concerned. Germany will remain what Germany is and has been, and the same applies to Russia.

I have decided that the common problems of Germany and Russia can best be solved by a common course of action. We have come to an understanding with Russia and we have decided that—contrary to British belief—our interests are indeed strictly limited.

The very fact that they are limited as demonstrated by this understanding, ought to make this very understanding a most welcome factor to Britain.

As far as our future aims are concerned, I want to state that our program will effect a general lessening of the European tension.

We have thought that, as far as the west is concerned, peace could be maintained, but certain western interests are opposed to this peace. They tried immediately to rupture the unbreakable ties existing between Mussolini and myself.

It has always been my aim to maintain friendship with Great Britain, but if they do not want this, then I have to answer, as follows: Poland as it existed after the Versailles treaty will never live again. After all, this statement is also backed by Russia.

The English statement that they are waging war only against my regime I personally take as a compliment. I am proud to be the object of their attack. Any German regime which would merit the praise of Britain would be in the pay of Britain.

And any Englishman who thinks that the German nation can be weaned away from me is down-right insane. England may be sure that the propaganda it is now waging will utterly fail of its mark. If they want to conduct effective propaganda they had better first come to Germany to learn a few lessons.

When they say that this war will last three years I can only say that I feel sorry for the French poilus, and, furthermore, in any determination as to the length of the war Germany—after all—will have something to say herself.

This war will never result in the dismemberment of the German Reich. We fight for our national existence. Think of it! England is not pleased by the internal regime in a certain country. And she thinks this fact alone gives her the right of removing this regime.

British Action Is Defied.

They claim that we are making war upon defenseless women and children. We have not done so and will never do so. As to their type of weapons they are using vessels and ships which, they think, we ourselves cannot employ in a return of these tactics.

However, we may some day surprise them by employing weapons which might not be available to them.

The British war is not by any means directed against our regime but solely and purely against the German nation.

We know what our fate would be if they were victorious. We are all well and happy. I would be glad to see them with a victory for them. They speak of liberating minorities, of the sections they would set free, and of the lofty brow upon which they would set the royal crowns.

I feel called upon to express my sincere thanks at this moment to the German people. You have performed and endured bravely. Soldiers, men and women have given what has been asked of them. The Almighty God who has blessed my army and my people, I will continue to aid you to this time will continue to aid you.

For the first time today I am back in the German city of Danzig. This city personifies the ideals which since time immemorial have motivated the German nation.

I have made a resolution never to enter this city until I would be able to come to you as your liberator. Today this day has arrived.

Through me you are now being accepted formally into the German Reich. We stand resolved never to surrender you again.

Danzig was German—Danzig is German—and Danzig will for all time remain a German city!

Generations will come and go but they will all look back upon the period just ended as a period of misery and suffering.

The greater German Reich is now united with you. May the Greater German Reich live and prosper!

Sieg heil!

CHURCHES OF CHRIST

POSTPONE CONVENTION

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 19.—(AP) H. B. Holloway, of Indianapolis, transportation chairman, announced today the third world convention of Churches of Christ had been postponed indefinitely because of the European war.

ARNALL TO DENY GOVERNOR USE OF ALLOCATED FUNDS

Attorney General Drafts Ruling Against Invoking 'Grandfather Clause' To Fill General Treasury.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall is drawing an opinion informing Governor Rivers that he cannot invoke the "grandfather clause" in the general appropriations bill against departments using allocated funds in order to swell the general fund, it was learned authoritatively yesterday.

Governor Rivers several days ago addressed a letter to the attorney general saying that he felt the grandfather clause could and should be applied to all departments of state, whether feeding on general or allocated revenues. Rivers cited various sections of the appropriations bill to support his contention.

The attorney general, it is understood, will inform the Governor in a few days that only those payments labeled fixed appropriations in the bill may be reduced. At present departments using general funds are operating on 55 per cent of their appropriations while departments using allocated funds are getting 97 per cent of their allocations.

The common schools, the university system and the department of public welfare operate on funds from the general treasury while such departments at the Highway Department, the Department of Public Safety, the Bureau of Agriculture, the Public Service Commission and the Banking Department operate on allocated revenues.

Observers have pointed out that in the event the attorney general should agree with the Governor, allocated fund departments would be slashed to about 81 per cent of their present revenue while the general fund departments would be increased to a similar percentage.

FATHER ATTEMPTS TO SAVE SON'S FINE

Relates Story of Mistaken Identity, Runaway Auto to Judge.

A father attempted to come to the rescue of his son yesterday in Fulton criminal court, but without success when Judge John McClelland refused to believe his story and found the son guilty.

W. C. Richards, 46, of a Murphy avenue address, was charged with six offenses ranging from driving cars twice while intoxicated to being drunk on a public highway.

Father Says He "Drove." His father, J. H. Richards, 66, of Murphy avenue, told Judge McClelland that he, not his son, was driving the automobile on one of the incidents.

"I never drove a car in my life, but that time I accidentally put my foot on the starter and the thing started off, nearly jumped out from under me," he said, asserting he was in the car alone when it got into motion in this manner and continued several blocks until it ran into the steps of a house on West View drive.

Several witnesses testified that this was the true and correct version of the affair. But the police arrested son W. C. and charged him with being drunk and operating the automobile.

Other witnesses identified the son as the driver.

Story Amazes Judge. "In cases of this sort, where there is such conflicting testimony, one must believe the most reasonable testimony," said the judge. "This is the most unusual story I've ever heard," he commented concerning the father's version.

Judge McClelland fined the son $175 and 21 months, suspended upon payment of the fine.

MRS. JEFF BURNETT DIES IN 82D YEAR

Funeral Services Will Be Held Today.

Mrs. Jeff Burnett, 81, died yesterday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. J. Savage, of Gadsden, Ala., where she has made her home for the last two months.

Mrs. Burnett was the former Ella C. Ellis, daughter of Fielding Lewis Ellis and Elizabeth Jarvis, of Richmond, Va. She was born at their plantation home in Jarvis, Ala.

She was the mother of the late Gordon Burnett and is survived by grandchildren, Mrs. Frank Davis and Mrs. Rufus Carswell, of Atlanta, and Lewis Patton Burnett, of California.

Funeral services and burial will be held this afternoon in Gadsden.

SABOTAGE SUSPECTED IN FREIGHT WRECK

CHESTER, Ill., Sept. 19.—(P)—The engine and five cars of the Blue Streak, fast cotton belt freight train, were derailed early today in a wreck blamed by an investigator on possible sabotage.

Fireman A. V. Shumway, of Fomell, Mo., suffered severe head injuries when the southbound train swerved into a siding, 22 miles north of here, and collided with two empty coal cars. Superintendent C. W. Exline, of the Missouri Pacific, investigated the collision and said he believed someone had tampered with a switch.

What Is Our Role?

While history is making so fast and in such fearful fashion, while the world is crumbling before shocked eyes of civilized men, when none can envisage what the reforming may be, it is well for us of the United States to consider, with reverent and sincere prayer, what must be the role of this nation in the great drama.

For the sake of decency and freedom for the children of the future it must be evident the part this country should play necessitates non-participation in the conflict now raging in Europe. The day seems to be fast approaching when the United States of America will be the last remaining stronghold of the democratic ideal. For, however may the chance of battle swing, it is inevitable that democratic government, in Europe at least, must suffer a hiatus of decades, perhaps an eclipse of centuries.

If the totalitarian governments, Germany with its Hitlerism and Russia with its Stalinism, should emerge on top, after the cannons have been silenced, there can be no more freedom, as we understand it, for individual men and women anywhere in Europe. Even in France and Britain individuals must then become mere puppets of the state, as they are today in Germany and Russia.

On the other hand, should France and Britain crush their foes they will be so impoverished and exhausted by the struggle they will be compelled to impose upon their own people laws and restrictions that will amount, in effect, to a similar authoritarian rule.

In such a pass, the only hope for keeping alight the fires of democracy rests in this America of ours. Should we go to war, impelled by sympathy or by fear, we should ourselves, perforce, sacrifice the greater part of our own hard-won liberties to the necessities of war emergency.

Commonsense and sympathy alike dictate a change in our so-called neutrality law. That law as it reads today is utterly unneutral. The embargo against shipment of war materials means, in practice, that this country is enforcing, on behalf of Germany, a blockade against England and France fully as effective as the naval blockade Britain is clamping down against Germany. It is unthinkable that this country, with all its love of individual freedom, with all its sympathies for the democratic nations of Europe in their struggle against unscrupulous force, should thus take part, even unwittingly, on the side of Hitler and his Nazi terrorists.

It appears to be the overwhelming sentiment of the people of the United States that the embargo clause of the act be amended to permit sale of any American products of field, of mine or of factory, to any nation, belligerent or neutral, which can buy for cash and transport in its own vessels.

That would be under present world conditions, true neutrality.

But, regardless of this immediate problem, it must ever be remembered that if this nation is to maintain the cause of democracy, today and through the coming years, it can only do so by keeping utterly aloof from war itself.

Twenty years ago, the United States went to war "to save democracy." That effort proved utterly abortive, as history has since proven. Today, with a somewhat parallel situation, it is even more important that this nation abstain from war, also to save democracy from extinction.

For war itself, regardless of objective or of justification, is the greatest of all foes of democratic freedom. Win or lose, the nation which sends its sons to modern battle, sends with them to their graves the democratic principles for which they die.

Peace and freedom are indissolubly linked. It should be the role of this country to champion freedom by maintaining a peace which shall serve as an inspiration and a torch at which other nations may, after war is over, rekindle their own beacons of liberty.

To keep that peace inviolate may involve tremendous self control and self discipline. Yet self discipline is, after all, far better than the discipline of Mars.

America must remain, in a world facing chaos, the sanctuary of peace and of freedom. The world will need such a sanctuary during many dark years to come.

Charles Mercer Snelling

The death of Chancellor-Emeritus Snelling, of the University System of Georgia, removes from the earthly scene a figure loved and admired by perhaps more sons of Georgia than any other of his generation.

For more than 50 years Chancellor Snelling had been on the faculty of the University of Georgia. More than 50 classes of young men had known, admired and loved him and it is probable that no student left the university without the friendship of Dr. Snelling and the memory of his kindly face among the most prized and vivid recollections of his course.

In large degree, Dr. Snelling was, to the majority of its alumni, the university. He typified its warm personality and personified the high ideals upon which it is based. He was devoted to the school and to all the youth who had come and gone through its portals during his life-time. Nothing, to him, was important save the welfare and growth of his beloved institution of learning.

The heritage he leaves is one that will bear worthy fruit in the lives of Georgians and in the development of Georgia for many years to come. The inspiration of his memory will lead to ever greater things, both for the university itself and for the men whose characters are indelibly stamped by his influence.

If They Can—We Can

War goes on in Europe hidden by censors, curtailed by claims and counter-claims. Only four nations are involved. Among those listed as neutrals are Denmark, Sweden, Norway, The Netherlands and Switzerland. All five remained neutral in the last war. All waxed more or less fat, grew lean, but emerged in better condition than any other countries in Europe.

Geography aids them. Nevertheless they are in the theater of war. They are European countries. Their interests most certainly are more directly concerned than our own. They remained completely mobilized in the last World War and are mobilized today. Yet they managed to remain out of the war. They will, without doubt, remain out of this war.

Granting they are small countries; admitting that geography assists them; conceding that fear of results may influence them because they are small, one still must admire their wisdom.

Out of their wisdom comes one clear message to the United States:

If those countries, in the theater of war, could remain neutral throughout all the World War of 1914-18, and if they again are neutral in this struggle—how much more sensible it is for us, hundreds of miles away, to remain neutral and keep out of war.

Our job is the easier. If they can, then certainly we can. They are five tremendously effective witnesses in behalf of the fact we do not have to go to war.

Juvenile Delinquency

A discouraging report recently came from Superior Judge I. M. Golden when he addressed the Northern California Mental Hygiene Society. Crime, said the judge, is costing the United States at least $15,000,000,000 a year and a losing war is being waged against it. And juvenile delinquency is mainly responsible, he added.

Making out a doleful, but realistic, case, the judge pointed out that social and scientific treatment of juvenile offenders in order to cope with the crime problem is one of the most serious problems facing American life today. He stated that it is definitely clear that "we must get at the roots of the causes of crime and take steps to eradicate them, if we hope successfully to tackle the problem. He insisted that it is not enough to punish the criminal; that punishment in reality accomplishes little and cures nothing.

In the judge's opinion, and it is worth listening to, the first step toward new and effective methods of coping with the situation must lie in teaching the abnormal or problem child how to meet the stresses and strains of everyday life as he grows into manhood. This is a question that must be approached from a medical, social, psychological and psychiatric standpoint. "To this end," he sums up, "institutions, sanitariums and paraphernalia, both human and mechanical, must be provided. It will cost less than what crime is now costing the United States."

The judge's suggestions are quite in line with modern thought, and must find a response in the minds of all persons interested in this most difficult problem.

On account of war, a rush to marry is noted in dreamy Philadelphia—of all places. Our only theory is that it must be the last war.

Old Abe is now premier of Japan, and old Ironsides commands the British armed forces. Thus all are accounted for but old Black Joe, who may be Stalin.

Unbearable: Gold has been struck in the famous Matanuska valley—and here we are, with no corridor to Alaska.

Who remembers when a blackout was nothing more offensive than a two-minute gag in a musical show, which, however, could be pretty offensive?

Editorial of the Day

EXPANDING AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

(From The Rome News-Tribune.)

Events justify the wisdom of those who have been urging the production of livestock upon a largely increased scale as one of the methods of offsetting losses arising from unsatisfactory cotton prices.

The livestock movement has been under way long enough to begin to bear substantial fruit in many quarters and conditions warrant continued development upon an expanding scale.

The opportunity is ripe for the south to gain a much larger degree of freedom from the one-crop idea that has prevailed in the past and full advantage should be taken of this situation. The time is here for the intensive production of the things that the south has been buying elsewhere.

Yet responsibilities in this connection reach to the city and face businessmen quite as much as farmers themselves. New lines of farm production necessitate new marketing facilities and it is here that the city must step in and provide the means of disposal.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

ON "WARTIME BASIS" WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The President's proclamation of a "limited emergency" has started talk which will not be stopped. It is said to be only the forerunner of another proclamation of full emergency. It is suspected of calling into being large but ill-defined powers which lurk, mysteriously and threateningly, in forgotten purloins of the federal statute books. It is thought to be the first step toward putting the nation on a "wartime basis."

It is true that there was little discoverable reason for the presidential proclamation, beyond the Rooseveltian taste for public drama. But practically everything that is being said about the proclamation, now that the first calm comments seem to be forgotten, is either exaggerated or incorrect.

On the one hand, there is the emphasis on the proclamation's "limitation." Since the limitation was a statement that the emergency concerned preservation of neutrality and the national defense, it cannot be considered very circumscribing. He would be a poor government lawyer indeed who could not find some connection with national defense or neutrality in virtually any contemplated move. Then, on the other hand, the emergency powers which the President can exercise under the proclamation are just about one-tenth as great as has been generally supposed. Following is a list of them, drawn from Justice Department studies prepared, presumably, for the President's use:

- HIS POWERS
1. He may incorporate the coast guard in the navy; call national guard officers to active duty (but not for more than 15 consecutive days); designate any place as a military area guarded from spies and stray photographers; command the construction of emergency forts, and in general improve and round out the military establishment in various minor ways.
 2. He may take steps toward bringing the army and navy up to full strength did not even require emergency authorization.
 3. He may certify the existence of an emergency to the Interstate Commerce Commission, thus obtaining broad powers over the nation's transport. Besides putting the railroads pretty much in his hands, these powers permit him to do such things as arrange for the construction of additional transport equipment.
 4. By a similar certification to the Maritime Commission, he can obtain similar powers over water transport.
 5. He may lower tariffs, but only for the stated purpose of facilitating the importation of food, clothing and medical supplies needed in emergency relief work.
 6. He may restrict the use of American ports by submarine or other armed vessels of foreign nations.
 7. He may close the banks or make rules restricting their business; may take control of foreign exchange trading, and can close the stock exchange.
 8. On certification of an emergency to the Communications Commission, he may suspend or amend the regulations concerning radio broadcasting, may close stations for certain specific reasons, or may take them over on payment of just compensation. At the same time, he is specifically and strongly prohibited from infringing in any way upon freedom of speech on the radio.

THE REAL LIMITS There is no space to give the history of the various powers set forth. It is sufficient to say that most of them could have been exercised by the President in any case without such a general statement of emergency as the recent proclamation, and, in order to be exercised now, will require further proclamations explaining such actions as may be proposed.

At first glance, the powers may seem great, but the truth is they are no greater than those potentially enjoyed by any president. The majority of them have been dormant since the last war because events and public opinion did not call for their exercise. The same restriction on their use exists now as has always existed. Finally, it may be added that, of the actual wartime powers granted President Wilson, only the power to close the banks has survived as a peacetime authorization. It was saved after the World War because international exchanges were then in such a troubled state. And the memory of the way it was suddenly pulled out of the hat in 1933 is probably the real source of the current widespread worry.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Home Again!

There is no rhyme at the head of this column this morning. Thoughts and emotions are, perhaps, too tense. Perhaps, it may develop there will never again be the daily verse for the column. Maybe experiences of the past few weeks in war Europe and crossing the Atlantic have knocked that funny little tendency out for keeps.

However: We are devoutly grateful, friend wife and I, that the time of nervous strain is over and we both agree that Georgia, lovely as she has ever been, never before looked so beautiful as she does, to us, today.

We went to England for a vacation of two weeks. The first of those weeks was even more delightful, more wonderful than anticipation had painted. There are things that we would tell for one week to fill this column for months to come.

But then came the growing realization that war was coming. And, at last, the Sunday when Britain's time limit expired and there was nothing else for Chamberlain and his government to do but declare that war existed against Germany. Rather, against Hitlerism, and all it stands for.

We were in a lovely English home that day. We listened, at 6:30 o'clock that Sunday evening, to the King's message over the radio and, at its end, we all stood while "God Save the King" was played.

Then we went to church and listened to a thoughtful sermon on the theme "Courage," and walked quietly home in the gathering dusk, before another night of black-out descended.

The Spirit Of England.

Never, in all my life, have I witnessed an entire people so unanimous on any issue as the British people about this war. It is unnecessary here to discuss the reasons or the backgrounds of their entry, once again, into war. One thing may be said. They are fighting to smash Hitlerism, that cruel, unscrupulous and ruthless use of force against innocent peoples. They are determined to smash this evil thing because they realize if they do not it will, sooner or later, smash them.

There was no excitement over there. I didn't hear any cheers at all, except from the troops crowding the army transports that left Southampton, while we were on the Aquitania, waiting admirably permission to sail.

Everywhere in England is a calm, quiet and utterly determined spirit. Ready for sufferings and sacrifices they know must come. Resolved, but serene. The spirit, in short, of people who have dedicated themselves to a crusade that must be fought to the bitter end.

It is the same, whoever you see or hear. From the "boots" in the humblest hotel to the divine in the greatest cathedral, they are as one for their cause.

The Churches Of England.

You know, of course, there are no places of amusement open in England, today. Theaters, motion picture houses, night clubs are all closed. The "pubs," the poor men's clubs, are open during the legal hours and it is possible, if you can negotiate the dark, lightless streets, to go to a hotel and sit in some grill room or lounge and listen to an orchestra. But that is all.

There is one human institution in England, however, that does not close at all, today. That is the church. From great Westminster Abbey to the humblest little chapel in the land, church doors are open all day long, every day.

Inside there are people, sitting quietly or kneeling in prayer. They are taking part in the continuous prayers and services of intercession. Praying for the intercession of the Prince of Peace, to bring back to an evil and tottering world that peace for which His Son died upon a cross.

In the great cathedrals, Westminster, Chester, Liverpool, St. Paul's and all the rest, there are places set aside, where sightseers may not go, for these continuous services of intercession.

It is a good thing, a reassuring thing. For no man can doubt that a people who turn so naturally and humbly to their God, in times such as this, will achieve the spiritual victory, when arrayed against a system that has turned its ruthless hand, even against the church.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Sunday, September 20, 1914: "London, September 19.—Although the result has been achieved by either of the great armies facing each other in northern France, it would appear from the French official report issued today that the allied forces are beginning to make their continued pressure felt."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Friday, September 20, 1889: "Salt Lake, Utah, September 19. Mrs. Hiram Snell, of Malad, Idaho, has given birth to sextuplets, three boys and three girls. They weigh eight pounds altogether. All are lively and hearty, and promise to live."

Skiers' Exercise.

With the snows gone, a group of international skiers have taken up rock climbing at Sun Valley, Idaho.

Dick Durrance, Dartmouth ace and America's top amateur skier, has organized "crag" excursions, including Durrance Crookes, Portland, ex-Olympic skier, Fred Pfeiffer, and Betty Duncan, Chicago.

Thus far the parties have attacked the precipitous granite heights of Mt. Heyburn at the head of Redfish lake in the Sawtooths.

Durrance described Heyburn, whose base is reached by boat to the headwaters of Redfish lake, as the nearest American approach in formation to the Aiguilles de Chamonix, France.

The mountain's entire crown is composed of sharp granite pinnacles, some too dangerous for scaling.

Durrance and Pfeiffer, the Austrian skier—both are as expert with alpine stocks as with ski poles—plan to scout Mt. Snowy-side and the "finger" for possible climbing.

When Huey Flouted Senate

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—If my understanding of the charge against Seymour Weiss is correct, this prosecution was almost as great an indignity to the law and the prestige of government as the offense from which it arose. Weiss was Huey Long's treasurer, who, once upon a time, in effect, threatened to slap the ears off an accredited representative of the United States senate and made the senate curl up and quit. He was Huey's manhood—an impudent, arrogant political racketeer who gave the Kingfish physical courage in moments of stress and in turn received from Huey the protection of a crooked political machine for operations the nature of which will be revealed in further trials in New Orleans. It was not because the senate was afraid of Weiss that the membership of that august body suffered him to flout its authority and dignity personified by General Ansell during an investigation of the fraudulent election of a colleague from Louisiana. The senators were afraid to tangle with Huey, whose machine had performed the election fraud, and they realized that under Huey's protection he had nothing to fear from the senate.

Weiss has now been sentenced to 30 months in prison for using the mails to defraud—a federal charge—in connection with a large transaction which has enriched the criminal palaces with the picturesquely named "double-dip." He and other surviving heirs of the Long machine sold a hotel property, including furnishings, to the state of Louisiana for a certain price and then sold the same furnishings again to the state in a separate transaction.

Was State Offense

The fraud itself was a state offense and no concern of the federal department of justice, and the use of the mails in its completion was incidental, inadvertent and unimportant. But once the thievery of the machine had been revealed by independent journalistic enterprise Frank Murphy intervened, or intruded, and discovered that in the course of his routine certain documents in the double-dip had been sent by mail. This gave him a technical charge against a group of rogue politicians who, until that time, had been on useful and congenial terms with the New Deal but who now, what with the disclosure in the press, were not merely useless but an embarrassment. It is hard to believe that Mr. Murphy, though new to his job, was entirely surprised to learn that the Louisiana machine was crooked, for even if his knowledge of Democratic politics didn't include a smattering of Louisiana matter surely his F. B. I. and his nose knew. Those who like to believe that Mr. Murphy intervened with his mail fraud charge for the impure political motive of matching or minimizing Tom Dewey's record in New York have a right to that belief.

It is one thing to punish a man for murder because he has incidentally killed another while engaged in a robbery, but to charge him with illegal parking because he left his car by a hydrant, is another and let it go at that is quite another. Having stuck Weiss for 30 months for violation of the postal laws, Murphy had made it almost impossible to get him in a state trial for the major offense of the fraud itself. True, it might be impossible to get him for fraud in the state courts anyway, for state judiciary, prosecutors and jurymen being what they are, but that was none of Murphy's business unless it be held that Louisiana and any other state that he cares to name is incapable of minding its own affairs.

Jeopardizes Real Charge

This prosecution on the minor charge seriously jeopardizes the only charge that really matters. It tends to degenerate still further rather than to reform the state courts, and it gives encouragement to the belief of thieving politicians, such as Pendergast, of Kansas City, that they can rob and defraud citizens in the state courts and get away with it. It is a pity that the state judiciary and jurymen being what they are, but that was none of Murphy's business unless it be held that Louisiana and any other state that he cares to name is incapable of minding its own affairs.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE TREATY OF BREST-LITOVSK

Hitler spoke yesterday at Danzig. He declared the city had returned to the Reich forever. Often he spoke of his exhausted patience. He spoke, too, of the treaty of Versailles and its inequities.

The treaty was not a good one. I stood once in the great hall of mirrors at Versailles and tried to picture the men there, the many languages, the victors, the vanquished. I tried to picture Woodrow Wilson with his schoolmaster's face and his idealism which burned like a flame. They made a treaty. Wilson agreed to it. He believed in the 14 points and that the League of Nations would protect it. The League failed, largely because of Borah and Johnson. What Wilson predicted has come true. Borah even now is engaged in another prophecy, his voice thinner and more uncertain because of the toll of the years. The treaty was not a good one. It did a few good things. It restored nationalism to the Poles, to Finland, to the Czechs. It gave back to Denmark some territory lost in 1864.

When Hitler speaks of treaties he forgets the two cruelest treaties of the more civilized era of mankind were imposed by Germany, one on France after the Franco-Prussian war, the other on Russia in 1917. The latter was more cruel and exacting than the Franco-Prussian treaty. It was the treaty of Brest-Litovsk.

By the terms of the settlement Russia lost many thousands of miles of territory. Some 55,000,000 people were removed from Russian control. Two states, Finland and Ukraine, were set up on her soil. The Baltic provinces, together with all Poland, were taken by the treaty. Russia was deprived of all conquests of the past 250 years and a series of border states set up about her. It abolished the Russian state. It took over, by signed treaty, all the trade of Russia. It opened all the railroads, ports, rivers and economies of Russia to immediate German use. German mastery of Europe, with a dash into Asia assured, needed only time to organize a victory.

Between Germany and this goal there remained only the armies of France and England, shaken by the defeats and disasters of 1917, sustained only by the hope that America might come in.

No people in all history, not even the French under Napoleon, looked forward to a brighter prospect of victory and conquest than did the Germans in March, 1918.

Germany had lured Russia on, had aided the revolution with funds and workers, had promised a generous peace. The world saw in that peace the truth of the German spirit. It was Belgium, the Lusitania, it was fire and sword. The peace held out to Russia had been revealed as a sword. The weary armies of the Allies dug in. Ludendorff began his march. Before the horror of the Brest-Litovsk treaty had been realized in Russia, his guns were thundering between the Oise and the Scarpe. The curtain was going up on the last great drama of the war. The fourth—and final act—was beginning.

OTHER TREATIES

So, there have been other treaties. Hitler's position now is a dominant one. His armies have been tested and given a victory. His borders are secure. Only at the west wall of the Siegfried line do the big guns thunder. The small countries about him; the neutral countries of Scandinavia, tremble.

It is impossible to believe that in 1939 the German army is as good as the one of 1914. Yet, it has one thing which is good—it's air force. It was the air force which, more than German speed, decided the issue in Poland. Germany systematically wrecked the Polish airports. Planes cannot function without them. The Germans were supreme in the air. They could bomb and harass troops, break sources of supply, disrupt reserves. There is where the planes work best.

Now, we turn to the west wall of the Siegfried line. It is impossible for either line to be taken quickly or without tremendous loss of life. There will be a long stalemate there. The English navy, and that of France, will rule the seas. The submarines will take a toll. But they cannot open the sea lanes. England can carry on a war of attrition for a long period of time. But Germany has sources of supply she did not have in 1914 or 1917. They are organized. They are able.

Hitler will keep suggesting peace. He will hold out the prospects of a lasting peace. The fact he has lied and that his word is empty of honor and meaning, will not be remembered. England and France will be forced into the position of continuing a war—a war which of necessity must be slow and painful. Hitler holds the cards.

PRESSURE ON AMERICA

It assuredly is to our interests that France and England win. It assuredly is to our interests that they win without our going to war. That is why it seems so vitally important that we sell them everything they need in great quantities so they may win without our soldiers.

Talk to any of those who went to France in 1917. They arrived there when the English and French morale was at its lowest ebb. They couldn't understand the pessimistic, dispirited soldiers. The Americans were kept in reserve. Each day the reserve was moved back.

"What's the matter with these guys?" they raged. "Let us get up there. We'll stop those ——" They forgot the three weary years of shellfire, of mud and

FATE OF 3 BALTIC STATES IN BALANCE

Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania
Bob Helplessly in Surge of Events.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 19.—(AP)—With Estonia's coast reported blockaded by Russia's navy, three tiny states lying along the Baltic sea formed a question mark to-night in the revamping of eastern Europe's map by the German and Russian military machines.

Dependent for their existence on the mutual interest of Germany and Russia in their independence, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania bobbed helplessly, like corks on turbulent waters, in the surge of events which struck Poland and which may at any time be directed against them.

Despite Russia's assurances of neutrality, there loomed indications that she intended to dominate the North Baltic area where she was said to want an ice-free port.

Uppermost was a report by Tass, official Soviet news agency, that Polish and other submarines had found refuge in Baltic harbors, allegedly with the aid of certain government authorities.

of Athens, will officiate, assisted by the Rev. E. L. Hill, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Interment will be in Oconee cemetery.

An honorary escort from the Board of Regents will be composed of Abbot Nix, of Athens; Miller S. Bell, of Milledgeville; J. Knox Gholston, of Comer; and Colonel Sandy Beaver, of Gainesville; Marion Smith, chairman, announced.

Honorary Escorts.

Dr. George M. Sparks, director of the University System Center, composing the Georgia Evening College and the Junior College of Atlanta, named an honorary escort to represent each of the two divisions.

Representing the Evening College will be Dr. Elmer G. Campbell, Dr. Joseph N. LeConte, Dr. James Routh, Dr. Carl Maulsagen, Dr. H. R. Hunter and Professor T. M. McClellan. The Junior College escort will be composed of Dr. Meri Walker, Dr. R. R. Hollingsworth, Mrs. Malcolm Bryan, Mrs. Joseph Hosmer, Professor V. V. Lavroff, and Professor George Richter Jr.

State officials joined in paying tribute to the educator.

Rivers Pays Tribute.

Governor Rivers said Dr. Snelling's death "brings to an end a long and distinguished career, most of which was spent in constant effort toward the progress of Georgia's system of higher education."

The Governor said the chancellor "gave many fine and fruitful years of his life" to the state university and its branches and added that Georgia loses a great educator and a sterling citizen in his passing."

Dr. S. V. Sanford, present chancellor of the University System, also paid a warm tribute to Dr. Snelling.

Sanford Laments Loss.

"It is no easy matter in a few words to note the record of one who has to his credit so many outstanding achievements as Charles Mercer Snelling," he added. "For 51 years he served as a teacher, administrative officer, president, first chancellor of the University System of Georgia."

"A staunch Christian, brilliant teacher, and an efficient executive, a constructive citizen, a charming companion, and a loyal friend he has been to all who knew him. He was a teacher or administrative officer and a noted educator throughout the country. He brought to the university fine scholarship, versatile talent, strong character and an untiring devotion to duty."

The public and private life of this, my friend, is an admirable one, worthy in every way—clean and inspiring. He was my loyal friend, and I always found him to be a wise counsellor. He was always kind and sympathetic, and radiated respect and affection. At all times he commanded the respect of all and the affection of a host of friends in all walks of life.

Loss to Georgia.

"Charles Mercer Snelling succeeded in every relation of life—as husband, father, citizen, educator and friend. Death has deprived Georgia of a devoted and distinguished educator. He will be mourned by thousands of young men who sat in his classrooms and received instruction and inspiration. He was the type of man whom to know is to love."

Chancellor Snelling was born in Richmond, Va., November 3, 1862, the son of Zachary and Cleopatra (Perdue) Snelling. He was educated at the Virginia Military Institute, receiving his A. B. degree there in 1884.

In 1890 he was awarded an honorary A. M. degree from the University of Georgia, and in 1893 and 1894 he studied at the Universities of Göttingen and Berlin. In 1911 he received the degree of doctor of science from the University of Göttingen and Berlin. In 1911 he received the degree of doctor of science from the University of Pittsburgh.

At G. M. A. in 1885. The former chancellor began his career as an educator soon after his graduation from Virginia Military Institute, serving as adjunct professor of mathematics the following year.

He first came to Georgia in 1885 when he became professor of mathematics at Georgia Military Academy. After a year there he taught for two years at the South Georgia College at Thomasville. His first connection with the University of Georgia came in 1888 when he joined the faculty as adjunct professor of mathematics and commandant of cadets. As commandant he was known as "Colonel" Snelling to faculty and students. The title persisted long after he had given up his military duties and even after he became chancellor.

Made Dean in 1909. The growth in enrollment of the university had so increased by 1909 that Chancellor David C. Barrow needed relief from the absorbing details of internal administration. The trustees appointed Dr. Snelling dean of Franklin College. Describing his record as dean, an article on Dr. Snelling in the Georgia Alumni Record of April, 1936, said:

It is well known with what wisdom and judgment Dean Snelling performed this part of his service to the complete satisfaction of Chancellor Barrow and the faculty and with manifest increase in the smoothness and efficiency of internal administration. Upon the retirement of Chancellor Barrow, Dr. Snelling was named acting chancellor and a year later was elected chancellor by the board of trustees.

Retired in 1933. He served as chancellor of the university until January 1, 1932, when the Board of Regents took office and elected him chancellor of the entire University System of Georgia. He continued in that capacity until June, 1933, when he was retired at his own request. On requirement he was given the title of chancellor emeritus and director of adult education in Georgia.

Death Ends Career of Georgia Educator

The tenure of Chancellor Snelling was one of marked expansion in physical equipment, financial income and teaching service of the university.

During the six years of his administration Woodruff Hall, the Commerce-Journalism building, Sanford stadium, the Military building were completed, and the Joseph E. Brown dormitory and Harold Hirsch Hall, new law building, were begun.

Standards Raised.

At the same time the university improved in other ways. Standards for admission were raised. Dr. Snelling strongly supported plans in progress for operating the university on a four-term basis, made feasible by the development of the summer school.

He viewed with deep interest the work of the graduate school and its rapid increase in numbers as an agency for extending the opportunity for higher scholarship and research and the better training of thinkers and leaders in every field. He encouraged the younger men of the faculty by granting leaves of absence for study in other institutions.

Dr. Snelling took a great interest in the development of the law school and because of his influence and that of alumni it was admitted to the Association of American Law Schools.

Fostered Music.

He also was a great lover of music and during his administration an organ was installed in the University chapel and the department of music was created under the direction of Professor Hugh Hodgson.

Dr. Snelling was particularly effective before the general assembly. State appropriations for the university were $245,000 in 1927 against $145,000 in 1925. In 1929 a further increase of $260,000 was obtained. As a result of these increased appropriations, the salary scale for the entire staff was raised.

When he became chancellor of the University System of Georgia in 1932, Dr. Snelling was unceasing in his efforts to bring order into the newly created university system. Because his duties were too strenuous, he resigned to become chancellor emeritus and head the adult education division of the university system.

Build Dining Hall.

Denmark dining hall is a symbol of one of Dr. Snelling's early services to the institution he loved so well. In 1898 he saw the great necessity of a co-operative student dining hall for the student of small means, and his efforts were quickly successful. By 1903 larger quarters were necessary and Denmark Hall was built to house it. For 15 years he managed it personally.

Chancellor Snelling was a life member of the National Education Association, a member of the American Mathematics Association, a director of the National Bank of Athens, president of the Athens City Band Commission and a deacon in the Baptist church. He also had served as a member of the city council of Athens and was a past president of the Athens Kiwanis Club and a member of Sigma Nu fraternity.

GOOD MORNING

CHINA CO-OPERATIVES.

Ida Pruitt, of Hongkong, China, arrived in Atlanta Tuesday to visit her father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Pruitt, 89½ West End avenue, S. W., and will spend some days in Atlanta on brief holiday with her parents in connection with a tour of the United States in which she is promoting the Chinese Indium Co-operative, an organization launched a year ago in China to help rehabilitate the war-torn industrial life of the nation.

Born near Chefoo, where Dr. and Mrs. Pruitt spent their long career as missionaries, Miss Pruitt has lived all her life in China, save the periods spent in America in school and in training for her work as almoner of the Peking Medical College for 18 years. She is one of the most widely informed students of the Far East.

Realizing the sad plight of millions of people following the capture of such industrial centers as Peking, Miss Pruitt set to work to find some way by which the people who lived in the areas of China's raw products might establish small units for manufacturing these raw materials into products ready for consumption. She enlisted the aid of international organizations friendly to such effort, and with the further aid of friends in New York, London, Manchester and Manila, she has been able to establish several hundred units, each with an average of 30 to 40 workers, scattered throughout the areas where enemy attack is unlikely.

They are successfully manufacturing titanium in Kwangsi, lead and zinc in a dozen centers, textiles on a small scale, soap, candles, leather, woollens, etc. Units for transporting the goods to central markets are now well established. In one center they are assaying gold with the most primitive machinery. The farmers discovered that their ducks rooted in the shallow water of the river and gradually their intestines became lined with gold. When the ducks are killed, the farmers dry the intestines and extract the gold.

The Chinese Co-operatives are meeting an emergency, according to Miss Pruitt, with a program which will ultimately decentralize industry, solving the problem of distribution of population, overcrowding, etc. In time of war this plan reduces the danger of enemy attack. All of which, for a country as large as China, and with over-crowded cities which means endless social problems, sounds quite heartening.

With the upset conditions throughout the world, and particularly in China where Japan has wrought such havoc, it is encouraging to know that people like Miss Pruitt are working with such enthusiasm and intelligence on the long program of rehabilitation.

Stone Learns That Clarence Mason Had a Grudge Against Harley

By CAROLYN WELLS.

SYNOPSIS.

Craig Madison, a young architect, meets Yvette Verne, a film star, at a cocktail party in New York and invites her to spend the week-end at the estate of his uncle, Harley Madison in New Plymouth, Long Island, who is regarded as an eccentric philanthropist. Craig and his cousin, Tom Sheldon, were brought up by Harley, a widower. He lives with the housekeeper, and Everett Ames, his secretary. Harley's plan to improve New Plymouth out of a common fund is suddenly opposed by men who want to be glorified by their donations. At the week-end party Yvette captivates everybody, especially Harley, much to the annoyance of Anita Boyce, a widow, who hopes to marry him. After Harley receives a threatening letter he announces his engagement to Yvette, destroys a small diary, the size of an owl blade, in Harley's skull. Corneille tells him the Madison pearls which she offered Yvette as a wedding present, are missing. She insists Yvette look the pearls. Stone, the lawyer, comes in to discuss legal matters. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT XXVII.

Fleming Stone did not believe Job Hendricks' story of why he went to see Harley Madison at 2 o'clock in the morning. He believed in the ladder episode, but he felt sure Hendricks had a wicked-evil design than a mere neighborly chat. He went on to the office of Hiram Riley, the astute lawyer, who attended to the legal affairs of New Plymouth's elite.

"I wish you'd tell me, Mr. Riley," Stone began, "how deeply Mr. Madison was involved in the affairs of the Village Improvement committee."

"Legally involved, at the moment, not at all. But at his death the committee stood to receive a bequest from Mr. Harley Madison's estate."

"You have not, then, been informed that Mr. Madison died intestate?"

"No, nor do I believe that. He told me frankly about the different wills he made, one after the other, every one increasing a legacy to the village. Why, that was the idol of his life, this little village and the flourishing town he intended to make of it. He was really dotty on the subject."

"I know that, but it didn't prevent him from fearing and burning his only existing will, and he died before he could draw another."

"Can you give me more details?" Stone complied, and soon Mr. Riley was in possession of the awful facts that would, it seemed to him, wipe out the committee and deprive its members of certain emoluments which they had come to look upon as their own.

Riley's hard, blue eyes, grew more and more troubled as Stone talked.

"I understand Madison was murdered," Riley said, after a pause.

"Yes, on the eve of a great happiness. He had just announced his engagement to Miss Verne, of motion picture fame."

"Yes, I know. Who killed him?" "That's what I am trying to clear up. Could you suspect any one connected with the village plans, who might feel in haste to get the big leg?"

"Are you asking which members of the committee hated him?" "I hadn't intended to put it like that, but I will. Can you tell me?"

"Of course I can, but why should I?"

"In the interests of justice, and to keep yourself entirely clean of any suspicion of being an accessory."

"Riley looked very thoughtfully. 'If I tell you of his enemies, will you promise to keep my name out of it?'"

"As far as I can."

"Well, it's a common belief that Job Hendrick and Potter, the butcher and Clarence Mason would willingly see Madison dead, for they've often said so, or as good as."

"I've met Potter and Hendricks, but Mason, who is he?" "He's an oil baron. Or, that's what he likes to be called. He and Harley Madison never could see things alike. Whatever one thought the other made it his business to think differently. But, look here, Mr. Stone, how did anybody kill Harley Madison? I understand it was done in a room that nobody could get into."

"That's the mystery. It was done in a room nobody could get into. But I know how to get a door unlocked, that had been locked on the other side and the key left in."

"How?"

"Two ways. One is a small gadget called a oostit, which is now made in so many clever designs, that nearly every door will fall open to its touch. The exception is one of these old, complicated backnumber locks, such as Mr. Madison chose to have on the door of his bedroom. The peculiar formation of that lock and key will not respond to the use of the oostit. And the old dodge of turning the key by use of strong pliers will not work, if the end of the key does not come through on the other side of the door, which in this case it doesn't. But I shall master it yet, of that I am sure."

"What do you call the thing?"

"Oostit, French, is the name of a small file monkey. Sometimes it is called the wistit. The name was given to this small tool, because of its quick and clever manipulations of its task."

"You spoke of another way in."

"The other way I mentioned is really a way out. You see the intruder at the Madison house had to get in and out both. A way out, leaving the door locked behind you, is to stick a pencil with a string tied to it, through the handle of the key, and as you go out, carry the string through the door with you. Once outside and the door latched, pull steadily on the string and the pencil will turn the key. Then pull the string through the door, and run away."

"Where's the pencil?"

"Oh, that stays inside on the floor. But it's such a little snubby old thing nobody notices it."

The way crime tears on, the whole population must be taught how to meet it."

Fleming Stone had drifted into this conversation that he might study the man he was with. He came to the conclusion that Riley was a shrewd, wily lawyer, who was not overscrupulous in his ways and means.

"I suppose," the detective said, "you were the lawyer for the corporation?"

"Would have been, if it had become a corporation, which was what we were planning. And I would have made a good thing of it. When it got fairly going, there would have been differences of opinion, and consequent libel suits and all that, and I would have been kept busy."

"Yes, you've lost a snug berth," Stone sympathized. "You're sure the rest of you won't go on?"

"How can we, without the Madison money? Do the other men know what you've told me?"

"Potter and Hendricks know it, and it will soon be public knowledge. Now, look here, Mr. Riley, somebody murdered Harley Madison. Could you suspect any one of the committee men, and if so, which one?"

"It might be said that loyalty to the others ought to seal my lips, and all that. But where is there any reason for my loyalty? What is there for me to be loyal to? The committee is not in any way a real organization, it was merely a preliminary meeting or two to get us started. We meant to organize at the next meeting and get incorporated and all that. I should have looked after all that business, and should have earned thereby, and justly, a tidy sum. I am real put out about it all, and whoever killed Madison did us all in."

"But himself, as well as the others. Remember, he did not know that Madison would die intestate. You seem fairly certain, that some member of your crowd did this thing, now, what do you—assume to be the motive?"

"Just this. It was rumored that Mr. Madison was in love with the actress who was visiting at his home. We began to see him taking unto himself a bride, who would, perhaps, turn his thoughts from his beloved village, and like as not, take him to New York to live. They might travel abroad and in their pleasure and new interests, he would forget all about the little village he loved so well, and we would see or hear of him no more."

"Did some one make a remark or drop a hint that if Madison died before his marriage, and also, before he had drawn a new will in his lady's favor, it would be a mighty good thing for the village committee men?"

"Well, I never heard it put into words, but there certainly were rumors and tales, which no doubt increased with every telling, all to the effect that the death of Harley Madison would be a blessing in disguise."

"I see. And now, Mr. Riley, what name was most prominent in those rumors and faint suggestions?"

"It cannot be denied that Potter and Hendricks were the most belligerent, but still waters run deep, and Clarence Mason, though he said little, was glowering with hate whenever Madison's name was mentioned."

"Private quarrels, I suppose?"

"Not so very private. It was all about the Town Hall. In a nutshell, the controversy between those two, was over the new Town Hall. Mason wanted it about the size of the coliseum, and decorated like a circus chariot. Madison was out for a large, dignified building, and they clashed. Mason called Madison a skink and a miser, and Madison, who never lost his temper, either ignored Mason, or held him up to ridicule. Mason is a sensitive case, but not garrulous. He said little, but he has looked like a revengeful fiend ever since. I'd believe it of him, if I heard he'd killed Madison, but how the devil he could manage it, I can't see."

"You'd suspect him before you would Hendricks, then?"

"Before Hendricks? I don't know. Before Potter? No. Henry Potter is a bad man. Born bad. I don't say he murdered anybody, but if you're looking for a suspect among the members of the committee, you can't do better than to choose Henry Potter."

SUBDIVISION QUIZ BEGUN BY SECRET GRAND JURY GROUP

Ownership of Property Improved With County Roads Studied; Probe Placing of Insurance.

Investigation into the ownership of residential subdivisions, near county parks, which have been roads and streets constructed with county materials and convict labor was launched yesterday by secret committee of the Fulton grand jury, it was learned.

The jury members are seeking to determine who benefits by the improvement of privately owned subdivisions when the cost of constructing streets and roads is borne by the county.

Look Into Insurance.
This phase came as the grand jurors took up another matter—that of county insurance, with the view of learning how the county awards its insurance business on the many buildings and materials throughout the county, it was understood.

The probe of county purchases also got under way yesterday when another secret committee held a meeting at the courthouse, following the regular grand jury session at which routine business was considered during the morning.

The group plans to go thoroughly into the manner of purchasing all the materials and equipment for the county, it was said. Records and witnesses are to be summoned.

Session Awaits Committee.
Although no special sessions of the full grand jury have yet been called, W. C. Wardlaw Jr., foreman, said that the committee will work on the various subjects until ready to report to the full jury.

MRS. RHORER GETS APPROVAL OF STATE

have to come from W. E. Mitchell, chairman of the county welfare board. Mr. Mitchell could not be reached for a statement.

Director Deen said that Dr. Huck "is a fine man but he does not come up to the requirements laid down by the Social Security Board in Washington." The state director added that Mrs. Rhorer met the professional requirements for the post and had been given state approval.

"I could not qualify to be county director myself," Deen pointed out. "The federal government requires that the person holding the post be either a graduate of a social service school or have similar training. Despite the fact that he had done a good job in Fulton county, Dr. Huck does not meet these requirements and, upon the insistence from Washington, we are requiring the change."

Dr. Huck, a retired minister, has been acting director four years. He succeeded the late Frank Miller. He was at his desk yesterday and said he knew nothing of any contemplated change.

Huck "Heard Rumors."
"Of course, I have heard some rumors," he said. "However, I definitely have not resigned and have no intention of resigning."

Discussing the Fulton county situation, Director Deen said that the Social Security Board called upon the state department more than a year ago to replace Dr. Huck, but that the state had "gone along" with the county on a temporary basis by having an assistant in Dr. Huck's office sign all papers transmitted to state headquarters.

"The Social Security Board notified us some time ago that October 1 would be the final deadline on Dr. Huck," the state official said. "We transmitted the orders to the county board and they have notified us that Mrs. Rhorer will become acting director October 1. She meets all requirements of the law and the regulations of the Social Security Board and we have, therefore, given our approval to her selection."

Mrs. Rhorer Is "Veteran."
Mrs. Rhorer is a veteran social service worker. She recently completed a special three months' course at the social service school at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Huck's name has been mentioned prominently in recent attacks on the Fulton county welfare setup by county officials, but Director Deen said that these attacks had nothing to do with the change in acting directors.

107,766 Given Vocational Training In Georgia High Schools Last Year

Session's Record Is 20,214 Ahead of Preceding Period, State Superintendent Collins Reports; Agriculture Leads With 45,435 Students.

Vocational education in agriculture, home economics, trade and industry, and distributive occupations was given 107,766 students in Georgia high schools last year, Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent, announced yesterday.

This represented an increase of 20,214 over the preceding year. Vocational training is taught under the supervision of M. D. Mobley, director of the division of vocational education.

Georgia inaugurated vocational education in 1918 when 2,642 students were enrolled.

Today the largest enrollment is for the agricultural classes which have 45,435 students. Of this number, 27,922 were adults enrolled in night classes directed by the vocational agricultural teachers of the neighborhood high schools.

Court Reverses Speed Conviction On 'Vague' Law

The Georgia court of appeals yesterday reversed a conviction for operating an automobile "at a rate of speed greater than is reasonable and proper" on grounds the wording of this charge was too indefinite to support enforcement.

The court reversed the city court of Americus which had denied a motion for arrest of sentence filed by Lee Allen Phillips.

Phillips was convicted of driving a truck on Cotton avenue in Americus at a rate of speed greater than is reasonable and proper. The appellate court said this language and similar language used in acts of 1910 and 1915 was so indefinite as to render those sections of the acts void and unenforceable.

BUICK ADDS 2 NEW SERIES TO 1940 CARS

Six Types Now on Display; 'Best Buick Ever,' Is Claimed.

Six new series of automobiles for 1940, featuring bold style treatments, increased horsepower, and improved safety developments were announced yesterday by the Buick division of General Motors and put on display in the showrooms of 2,800 distributors.

Two completely new series are included in the 1940 models. They are the series 50 Super and the 70 Roadmaster, constructed on entirely new chassis of 121 and 126-inch wheelbase respectively. They will supplement the regular Buick models, 40 Special, 60 Century and 80 and 90 Limiteds.

Improved Design Noted.
Structural and design features for next year include improved torque tube drive, independent front wheel suspension, ride stabilization and improved lighting equipment.

Bold and artistic style developments have provided a distinctive change over previous years. Underneath the exteriors are chassis held to be the sturdiest yet produced by Buick.

The new series have a reduced overall height and floors have been lowered, allowing the elimination of running boards. In spite of the increased height, adequate headroom has been designed into them.

Uniteel Gives Strength.
The new bodies employ uniteel construction to give hitherto unstained structural strength and rigidity. A front and rear directional signal system, designed to warn both following and opposing traffic of contemplated changes in direction, is included as another safety feature.

The under-seat heater, standard and optional equipment on various models, has been improved in the new cars. Rear as well as front compartments can be heated to an exact desired temperature. A dash mounted defroster has been mounted on the windshield. Buick continues the valve-in-head straight eight engine designs, developing 107 to 141 horsepower in different series. Engines have been balanced after assembly and cradled in rubber mountings.

BODY OF T. V. NUNES IS TAKEN TO N. C.

Rites To Be Held at Hendersonville.
The body of Tillou Van Nunes, Atlanta attorney, who died unexpectedly Monday night at the baseball park, yesterday was taken to Hendersonville, S. C., for funeral services and burial under direction of H. M. Patterson & Son.

Mr. Nunes, a former resident of South Carolina, had made his home here for many years. He retired from active practice in 1933 and for the past six years had been connected with the Atlanta Law school.

Critical Moments Contest Closes At Midnight Tonight; $50 Cash Up

Advise Lady Esketh How To Decide Before Bromfield's Great Story, 'The Rains Came,' Begins at Fox Tomorrow; You May Share in Money.

The last day of the Critical Moments movie contest has arrived. And here is the third and final Critical Moment—

Will Lady Esketh (Myrna Loy) find happiness in the eastern way of living if she leaves the western world as personified by Tom Ransome (George Brent) and marries Major Safu (Tyronne Power), of India?

In other words—does love remove all barriers and can it overcome all obstacles?

Study the three Critical Moments that have been outlined in The Constitution for the last three mornings and, in no more than 150 words, let us have your opinion on one of them.

Tell how you feel about one of the problems and let us know what you would have done if you had been in the other fellow's shoes.

Get your essay into the mail by midnight tonight. Address it to the Critical Moments Contest Editor, care The Constitution.

These three situations are pictured in the Darryl F. Zanuck production, "The Rains Came," which opens tomorrow at the Fox theater. The film is based on the best seller from the pen of Louis Bromfield.

Prizes will be: For the best essay, $20; second best, $10; third, fourth, fifth and sixth, $5 each. For the 15 next best essays submitted, a pair of tickets will be awarded to each, entitling the holder to admission to the picture at the Fox theater.

'WAR BABIES' SOAR AS WALL STREET LISTENS TO HITLER

$2 to $8 Gains Felt in Steel, Other Groups That Armament Demands May Help; Losses Cancelled.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The stock market's "war babies" were sent soaring once more today after Wall Streeters listened to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's speech at Danzig.

Prices of stocks in steel and other industrial groups which traders supposed might benefit from armament and other wartime demands bounded up $2 to as much as $8 a share.

Losses Cancelled.
This more than cancelled losses of yesterday, when the market had its sharpest setback since April, attributed by brokers to selling on the theory the Russian move into Poland might cause a stalemate resulting in peace proposals.

The market recovered $1 to $4 a share in many issues this morning, then settled back, as traders awaited the broadcast of the Fuehrer's remarks.

The ticker tape came almost to a standstill during the address. Brokers on the floor of the exchange stood about chatting, frequently stepping to private telephones to their offices for the latest word.

In brokers' customers' rooms, traders clustered about radios, and over financial news tickers.

Within five minutes after conclusion of the speech, prices were rocketing on the floor of the exchange. Brokers said traders generally, while noting Hitler's statement "we have no war intentions against either England or France," found no tangible peace proposals.

Wave Short Lived.
The buying wave was short lived. Trading slackened again within 20 minutes. But prices held up in the main during the rest of the trading session.

Bethlehem Steel was again a high flyer, closing at $92.50, up $8.50. United States Steel finished at $77.25, up $6.75. Issues up $2 to $5 included Douglas Aircraft, Allied Chemical, duPont, Anaconda, Kennecott, Texas Corporation, Republic Steel, Santa Fe, New York Central, Chrysler, Westinghouse, International Harvester and others.

'HORRIBLE NIGHTMARE,' SAYS ACCUSED SLAYER

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Sept. 19.—(AP)—"It all seems to me like a horrible nightmare. I've read stories of murder but they all seemed so remote. I can't realize such a thing has really happened to me."

That was what Floyd Arnold, telephone lineman, told reporters today after he had been formally charged with first-degree murder for the slaying of Mrs. Virginia Walker, 19-year-old beer garden waitress, whose mangled body was picked up last Friday morning near a West Side cemetery, after wheels of an incoming Seaboard Air Line train had passed over her.

Twenty minutes after it heard the testimony, the coroner's jury returned a verdict that Mrs. Walker came to her death from a throat wound inflicted by Arnold.

INDUSTRIALISTS HIT WAR PROFITEERING

Assert Peace Must Be U. S. Objective; Domestic Problems First.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The National Association of Manufacturers asserted tonight that "peace must be the national objective" and "industry opposes profiteering."

A statement issued by Howard Connelley, its president, on behalf of the industrial body, said: "American industry hates war. War destroys lives. War wrecks homes. Economic chaos and years of crushing depression are its inevitable aftermath. It imperils representative democracy."

Industry Wants Peace.
"American industry wants peace. Peace must be the national objective."

"The United States can stay out of war."

"Europe's problems do affect us, but our domestic problems still must come first."

On the problem of profits and prices, the association said this:

"Industry opposes profiteering—the utilization of war psychology to boost prices for the purpose of making excessive profits."

Cite Responsibility.
"As manufacturers we recognize it to be our responsibility and moral obligation to conduct our businesses so that the prices of the products we produce and sell are related equitably to production costs."

"In a world distraught by force the best way to preserve representative democracy is to practice it."

WALLACE ASKS AID TO BAR PROFITEERING
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace asked farm, food and clothing industry leaders today to co-operate with the government to prevent "profiteering" during the European war.

The request came at a meeting of the agricultural advisory council, composed of 30 farm and business leaders.

NEW ENGLAND BLOW COST $400,000,000

'America's Costliest Disaster' Took 680 Lives.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 19.—The hurricane that swept parts of Long Island and New England a year ago this week was "America's costliest disaster," the Travelers' Insurance Company today, listing the death toll at 680 and estimating property damage at $400,000,000.

"From the standpoint of property damage, no mishap in American history can compare with the big blow on September 21, 1938," the company's statement said.

The Galveston, Texas, tornado in 1900 took 6,000 lives, but the property damage was only $30,000,000.

Loss in other disasters listed by the Travelers was:

San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906—450 lives, $350,000,000 damage.

Chicago fire of 1871—200 lives, $200,000,000 damage.

Florida hurricane of 1926—370 lives, $76,000,000 damage.

JAPANESE FLIERS IN SAN SALVADOR

Hop 800 Miles From Miami in 4 Hours, 45 Minutes.

SAN SALVADOR, Sept. 19.—(UP)—The Japanese round-the-world plane, Nippon, with a party of seven aboard, arrived here today after an 800-mile non-stop flight from Miami, Fla.

The twin-motored monoplane landed at the local airport at 11:05 a. m., four hours and 45 minutes after leaving Miami.

CENTRAL DENIED PERMIT TO DROP LOVEJOY UNIT

The Central of Georgia railroad was denied authority yesterday by the Georgia Public Service Commission to discontinue its agency at Lovejoy.

The commission ruled, however, the case may be reopened on application after 12 months.

Approved by the commission was the Central of Georgia's request to close the agency at Vaughn, operated jointly with the Southern railway.

Boosting Army In Lap of Gods, Says Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—President Roosevelt told a press conference today that the question whether the army would be built up to full peace time strength in the future was in the lap of the gods.

He could boost the enlisted strength from the 227,000 he has authorized to the 280,000 which congress has approved, he added, but there are no plans for doing so at the present time.

The subject came up when he was asked about boosting army strength in the light of a proposal by General John J. Pershing, wartime commander-in-chief, that the service be built up to its maximum, authorized peace-time strength of 280,000.

DR. POUNDS' DEATH DECLARED SUICIDE

Services Today for Physician Found Dead at Graveside of Wife.

Investigation into the death of Dr. Roy S. Pounds, Redan physician whose body was found Monday night by the grave of his wife, yesterday brought a verdict of suicide from a DeKalb county coroner's jury.

Dr. Pounds, who had been dependent since the death of his wife two months ago, was shot through the head. Near his body which had fallen by his wife's graveside was a 12-gauge shotgun.

Funeral service will be conducted by the Rev. James L. King at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Redan Baptist church. Burial will be made in Redan cemetery.

Dr. Pounds is survived by four children, Misses Martha and Marjanna Pounds, Mrs. Corley Johnson, and James Minor Pounds; his mother, Mrs. Minor B. Pounds; three brothers, J. L. and J. T. Pounds, of Stone Mountain, and Boyd Pounds, of Decatur, and four sisters, Mrs. Stephen Hale and Miss Audrey Pounds, of Atlanta; Mrs. Luther Browne, of Stone Mountain, and Miss Doris Pounds, of Miami.

'HAM, EGG' ISSUE STIRS CALIFORNIA

$30-Every-Thursday Proposal Rivals War Interest; Vote November 7.

By WENDELL WEBB.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19.—(AP)—"Ham-and-eggs" — warmed over and seasoned with bonds, banks, taxes and tax-exemptions — vied with the war for top interest in California today.

The once-defeated (1,398,999 against 1,143,670 for) program of $30-every-Thursday overshadows all other domestic issues in California, with rival camps using every available advertising means to get voters to register in the nine days remaining before registration books close for the November 7 special election.

The proposal embraces the previous plan to grant every qualified, unemployed Californian over 50 a minimum of 30 one-dollar warrants weekly.

It calls for a state-owned $50,000,000 "credit clearing bank" with branches, a $20,000,000 bond issue, and a 3 per cent gross income tax. The warrants would be retired yearly by two-cent weekly stamps, for a gross revenue of $1.04 each.

Opponents say the state's economic structure would collapse in a conflict between legal tender and "funny money," and industries would move out.

YOUTH, 14, GIVEN 47 YEAR SENTENCE

Boy Pleads Guilty to Voluntary Manslaughter.

A 14-year-old negro boy pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter of a 16-year-old negro yesterday in Fulton superior court and received a sentence at the industrial farm of from four to seven years.

The youthful defendant, Charlie Lee Spivey, told Judge E. E. Pomerooy he knifed Clemmie Darden last July because he was afraid of the bigger boy. The judge allowed him to enter a plea on a lesser charge though he was indicted for murder. E. E. Andrews, assistant solicitor general, handled the prosecution while Russell Turner was attorney for the boy.

U. S. NEARLY BILLION 'IN RED' SINCE JULY 1

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Treasury expenditures today passed $2,000,000,000 for the fiscal year which began July 1.

The $2,088,868,262 spending total for the two and one-half months, however, was nearly twice the revenue total, and left a deficit of $932,273,417. On the comparable date last year, the treasury had spent $1,884,783,619, and had a $704,419,935 deficit.

Southern Belles Depart Tomorrow To Visit Schoolmate in Honolulu

By Sally Forth.

THE irresistible lure of the tropics is responsible for the departure tomorrow of Sybilla Pringle, who leaves for an extended sojourn in beautiful Honolulu. The popular belle will first journey to Cincinnati, Ohio, where she will meet her close friend and former roommate at Converse College, Rachel Jackson, of Tryon, N. C. Rachel, who will accompany Sybilla to Honolulu, is a popular figure in this city, where she has been a frequent and widely feted visitor.

The duo will visit friends in Chicago, Ill., Portland, Ore., Seattle and Spokane, Wash., en route to San Francisco, from whence they sail October 12. Brief stops at Yosemite, and Mount Rainier, in Washington, provide anticipated highlights of the trip.

Embarking on the S. S. Lurline, Sybilla and Rachel will enjoy a glorious voyage to the Paradise of the Pacific, where they will be welcomed by native Hawaiians bearing traditional leis of exotic flowers.

Arriving on the tropical Isle, they will visit Mickey Henkle, another school friend, whose father is stationed at the U. S. naval base at Pearl Harbor, where gay and exciting times await them. Sally ventures to predict that the southern belles will be adept at the favorite Hawaiian sport of surf-board riding when they turn their faces homeward in November.

Returning to Los Angeles on the Matsonia, the travel enthusiasts will follow a different route home, visiting the Grand Canyon; El Paso, an Antonio and Houston, Texas; the famous Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico, and last, but not least, gay New Orleans, in Louisiana.

A GALA season is at hand at the Capital City town club, with Jack Sherr's orchestra scheduled to play during luncheon hours on Tuesdays through Friday and at the dinner-dances on those same days. His orchestra will play during luncheon on Saturdays, at the cocktail hours, and at the supper-concerts which are on the taps every Sunday evening.

Versatile Jack Sherr and his famous hand will come direct from New York to play at the above mentioned social affairs. He is quite an interesting personage and plays 21 instruments and plays them well. He is 27 years old, single and a good-looking brunet.

Jack Sherr studied the piano but taught himself to play the flute, accordion, saxophone, clarinet, violin, drum, piccolo and the theremin, the latter being that new electrical device played by waving his hands.

He was born in Baltimore and gave his first recital at eight years of age. His father, a real estate, wanted his son to be a physician and sent him to Johns Hopkins in hopes he would become interested in curing human ailments and forget about music.

But the popular young man began directing the school band and organized the Hopkins Blue Jays, who played everything from classical to jazz music. He remained long enough at Johns Hopkins to receive his B. A. degree at 20 years of age. He declares the piano to be his favorite instrument, and the young maestro can toot a saxophone and clarinet at the same time.

WHEN Hubert Anderson trends the orange blossom trail in November, her older sisters will come to Atlanta to witness the ceremony that transforms her into Mrs. John Joseph Shaner.

Hubert is the namesake of her father, the late Hubert Anderson, well-known Atlantan. One sister, Mrs. Albert C. Morgan, is the former Leonora Anderson, and lives at Fort Benning, where her husband, Captain Morgan, is among the popular officers in the United States army. Another sister is Mrs. George Mann, who makes her home in Wilmington, North Carolina.

Leonora Anderson Morgan belongs to the fourth estate and was for several years a member of the staff of The Atlanta Constitution. She made an excellent journalistic record and contributed sparkling stories to the sports, society and news sections of the newspaper.

When the Fort Benning Dramatic Club presents "Three-Cornered Moon" in November, Leonora will direct the play, and she is on the committee to read the scripts for the club.

Exercise Takes Weight Off, Firms the Muscles, Tones the Skin

You Can Reduce A Bit Faster With Safety

By Ida Jean Kain.

In time, an average loss of two pounds per week can amount to quite a discard in avoirdupois. Overweights have been known to take off as much as 100 pounds by plodding at that rate. But there are a few impatient reducers who turn up their noses at any such "pokey" reducing. They are certain to take a personal satisfaction in the fact that, thanks to the doctors and the scientists, safe reducing has been speeded up.

It is now considered perfectly safe to take off as many as six pounds during the first week and to average three pounds per week thereafter until the weight is down to normal. That's decided increase over the average of two pounds per week formerly set as the maximum for safety.

There are several reasons—practically all dietary—why you can lose faster. One is a high protein content of the menus, to take care of the body's repair work. This protein has the additional effect of slightly stimulating the metabolism so that more calories are burned—something the reducer doesn't mind at all!

Since the diet can be supplemented with concentrated vitamins and minerals, there is no danger of a lack of these elements. As a matter of fact, it is possible for the reducer to be on a better diet while reducing than she would otherwise be! The inclusion of adequate and even optimum amounts of the vitamins and minerals on the low-calorie diet protects the vitality.

Still another reason that reducing can be safely speeded up is the stress given to exercise. Women used to pin their hopes of a lovely figure to diet. Now they know they must exercise, too, and there are accurate, specific exercises which take the weight off the right spots, firm the muscles, tone the skin—and leave the reducer looking younger!

So... if you will follow a balanced diet, with all the protein, minerals and vitamins you need, and take your daily stint of exercise, and have your doctor's permission to lose that quickly, it will be quite safe for you to average three pounds off every week.

Whether you can lose that much every week is something else again. Our typical reducer, who started her diet 50 pounds overweight, took off five last week. But it may have happened that you—who counted every single calorie—did not lose a pound! That's very discouraging. To cheer you up, I want to tell you of one reducer who moved 47 pounds in just five months, and who started off just as badly. At the end of the first week on a strict diet she hadn't lost a pound. By the end of the second week she had lost one pound. But she kept right on with her diet and exercises and by the end of the five months she had averaged a loss of two and one-third pounds per week!

Failure to register a weight loss occurs when the storage of water counterbalances the loss of fat. This is termed water retention. It may continue for two weeks, but all that time—if your diet is low in calories—you are losing weight, and eventually it will be registered on the scales. When water retention holds up the weight loss, the change in weight is usually abrupt and much larger than ordinary.

Send for the "Pointers to Slimness" and the "Reducer's Ten Commandments" and accelerate your weight loss with suggestions from these leaflets. Write to Ida Jean Kain in care of The Atlanta Constitution, enclosing a large, stamped return envelope.

From a four-cent package of seeds, E. P. Parker, of Liverpool, England, has grown a head of lettuce two feet two inches across and weighing three pounds two ounces.

Cream That Makes Skin Radiant And Acts as Powder Foundation

By LILLIAN MAE.

Perhaps you've noticed that I never make startling promises for cosmetics. Well, you know and I know that no beauty aid will make an ugly duckling into a fairy princess, or will make a woman of 45 appear to be 16.

But the proper cosmetics, properly used, can help to check and prevent certain skin tendencies which come with age and neglect. And let me tell you again right here, that I never recommend to you any product which I have not first tried out severely on either myself or one of my associates.

The cream to which I'm calling your attention today makes—in accordance with its name—a promise, rather than a threat—to rejuvenate. Well, I didn't let that bother me, but proceeded to use it according to directions one evening when dressing for a party.

But let me tell you what's claimed for that cream. It's called "a grand and unusual cream which brings a natural bloom to skin, thus eliminating the need of a powder base—its moisture making the face smooth, soft, alive and giving it the feel of a baby's."

It is claimed further, that applied after the face has been thoroughly cleansed and toned, and before applying make-up, it makes the face feel marvelous, leaves make-up natural and causing powder to cling for hours—without the need of any other skin young-looking.

Well, it did make me feel alive, and my make-up did go on very smooth and natural-looking over it, but the final test was when I arrived at the party. A number of the guests during the evening spoke of how vivacious and rested I looked—asking whether and where I had discovered the Fountain of Youth, etc.—as women will.

I immediately decided there was virtue in the cream and did not hesitate to recommend it to several of those women. And they have since that night thanked me profusely for the results they have obtained from its use.

Well, I wouldn't be without it now. It really does hold make-up in a fresh, natural-looking condition all day, and it does make for radiance in the evenings, though the same face may have a tired, worried look and feeling before using it.

I'd love to tell you more about this cream—and will, if you'll phone me for its name and the Atlanta stores at which it may be purchased. If you do not live in Atlanta write me, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Majority Prefer Older Styles Of Furniture

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

As if life were not already complicated enough, some modern designers of furniture are getting upset over the question of soundproofing furniture. It seems that they think something should be done about dresser drawers and the like that make noise when they slide in and out. We'll give them our blessings in this good work even though we personally have never been particularly concerned by drawers that make a little noise. But then maybe we're easygoing. Incidentally most of this sound-proof furniture is going to be of metal.

Another blow we had recently was the discovery that designers consider the seats on buses, cars and airplanes far more comfortable than any chair or sofa made for home use. Mebbe so. Anyway they expect to put really comfortable chairs on the home market soon. So get set for sitting pretty at home as well as on the road.

The Older Styles. For all the agitation we hear about furniture of plastics, glass, metal, soy beans, cellophane and goodness knows what—it is a comfort to hear from the leading furniture manufacturers that we will continue to have most of it of wood. And guess why? Simply because people like it better. The novelties are brought out on the market and talked about but most people prefer the older styles. But don't go to the other ex-

Rabies Primarily A Veterinary Problem

By Dr. William Brady.

Despite the ponderous scientific pretension of modern medicine there is still a good deal of fundamental unconscious hocus-pocus in the practice of the best physicians. Unconscious, I mean, in the sense that the practitioner accepts an idea or principle which has been handed down by revered predecessors who got it originally from folklore or maybe charlatanism. For example, the use of digitalis.

In the same revealing report in which Mrs. George A. Denison and J. D. Dowling infer from 17 years experience in dealing with the rabies problem in the "rabies capital of North America"—that "if rabies were as easily contracted by man as is commonly supposed, it would in Alabama become one of the leading causes of death. Instead, it continues to be a very rare disease," these authorities solemnly pass along a sizable hunk of the unconscious hocus-pocus that makes medicine so interesting, when they say:

"Complete reliance in the effectiveness of antirabies vaccine is never justified, and cauterization of wounds made by the animal with strong nitric acid is necessary for adequate protection of the patient. There is no substitute for nitric acid; mercurchrome and agents which coagulate the tissues are worthless..."

This assumption that only undiluted or "fuming" nitric acid, which by the way coagulates the tissues, will destroy rabies virus in a wound, is shared by many medical authors and public health administrators. It rests wholly upon conjecture.

Understand, I don't know whether rabies ever occurs in man. Most doctors still believe it does. I gather. But no one would apply pure nitric acid to a wound inflicted by a rabid dog if I were the patient. The wound would be disinfected and treated as any other possibly infected wound—and I'd have an immediate injection of antitetanus serum and a second injection of the same serum about five or six days later, by way of prevention of tetanus (lockjaw). That would be all. I'd be pretty mad about it for an hour, perhaps, but after that I'd forgive the dog even if he were madder still.

One of the conclusions reached by Dr. Denison, director of laboratories, and Dr. Dowling, health officer of Jefferson county, which includes Birmingham, will annoy the dog-chasing politicians of mal-administered health departments throughout the country. I quote it:

"Rabies is primarily a veterinary problem. Regardless of its prevalence among dogs, it will probably never cause sufficient morbidity or mortality among human beings in this region" (the rabies capital of North America) "to allow its classification as a public health problem of importance."

These authorities do not infer from their experience that Pasteur treatment is without value but rather than its value has been greatly exaggerated.

man beings in this region" (the rabies capital of North America) "to allow its classification as a public health problem of importance."

Opening three-card suit bids in the Culbertson system are necessarily prepared bids, restricted to minor suits to give partner an easy opportunity to respond.

Three-card suit bids in third or fourth position are usually confined to those hands with no bid-dable suit and of insufficient strength or incorrect distribution for one notrump openings, and being third or fourth hand opening bids, partner having passed, there is no obligation on the opener to be prepared for a rebid.

Conventional Opening. In the Culbertson system three-card suit openings are recommended, any position at the table, with the following type hands:

- | | |
|---------------|---------|
| (1) S-A 8 7 5 | D-A K 5 |
| H-K J 8 | C-J 6 4 |
| (2) S-K 6 4 3 | D-Q 4 3 |
| H-A 9 | C-A K J |

In the above examples, opening bidder has no biddable suit. (1) We bid one diamond, lacking sufficient high-card strength to bid one notrump with a 4-3-3-3 distribution. (2) We bid one club. Our hand was of incorrect distribution for one notrump.

Avoids Biddable Suit. While we should refrain from going out of our way to open the bidding on a three-card suit, there are occasions when in first or second position the short-suit opening should be preferred to naming a legitimate trump suit. For example:

- | | |
|------------|----------|
| S-A K 10 3 | D-6 5 4 |
| H-8 7 5 | C-A J 10 |

In the first or second position we bid one club. Partner is not likely to carry the bid to five odd without unusually strong trump support, and especially when we will never rebid the suit.

If partner responds one diamond or one heart, we are prepared with a response of one spade. To have opened this hand one spade would have resulted in an embarrassing situation, being forced to rebid our hand following a suit takeout by partner of two diamonds or two hearts.

No Obligatory Rebid. However, with this same holding, in third or fourth position, our opening bid is one spade, because as opening bidder in the third or fourth position, partner having previously passed, we are not obliged to rebid if partner responds as we would have both required to do when opening in the first and second position.

MY DAY We Must Be Useful As Well as Neutral

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va.—Well, we are off again, leaving Washington early this morning on our way to West Virginia. We go through beautiful country, but much that we see from the train window reminds us that a great nation at peace still has many problems to solve. This is a part of the world where agriculture and coal mining meet. The mining industry has, perhaps, been before the public as a problem as long as any other great industry in the country.

The two extremes of wealth and poverty shook hands in this industry even when it had not reached today's situation. Now we add not the problem of "Can a mine profitably carry better wages and better working conditions?" but "What can we do with people who once worked in the mine and never will work there again?" To me there is a sense of urgency about solving our economic problems and finding some kind of a pattern which we can offer the future.

I read both Anne O'Hare McCormick and Dorothy Thompson this morning, and the announcement made to the Russian people by their government on their entry into Poland. That last document could only be handed out to a gullible nation. But it is disheartening in the extreme, and I fear that Anne O'Hare McCormick, who is a wise observer of European affairs, is right in her conclusion that in this war the seeds of other wars are being sown.

What can we do as a neutral nation to bring some influence to bear in the future, when of necessity all nations must come to a period of weariness and, whether they like it or not, have a breathing spell? Certainly abdicating one's right to have a conscience and to use one's intelligence is never helpful. Certainly thinking only as individuals of what is safe for us, or what will profit us, is not very uplifting to the individual and, in the aggregate, does little to make our nation a force for good.

I read recently a statement made by a United States senator on neutrality. I listened to another senator on the screen last night. Why must we approach these questions solely from the point of view of what will save our skins and our pockets? In the end, if the skins of the rest of the world are removed and the pockets of the rest of the world are empty, we will grow thin and lean.

One man says this is 1914 all over again. No, there may be similarities, but there are fundamental differences. We have come a long way since 1914. I hope and pray that we will not have to fight with armed forces in this war, but we do have to fight with our minds, for this is as much a war for the control of ideas as for control of material resources. If certain ideas triumph, then what our forefathers founded in this nation in the way of ideas and ideals would receive a very serious blow.

What we need to think about today is how we can be useful as well as neutral. We must keep alive the ideals which now make life worth living for us. Hundreds of thousands of men, women and children are dying. Are we going to think only of our skins and our own pockets? We have a right to stay at peace, if by doing so we render a greater service to a war-torn world.

That is the important thing we had better be thinking about. This nation had a reason for survival when it was young and weak, because it offered the world a refuge of freedom and a new and better ideal. That is the justification for existence.

An appealing appetizer is shrimp in sea shells.

With Fall Comes Renewed Interest in Zestful Dishes

By SALLY SAVER.

With cooler days comes a renewed interest in zestful dishes. Appetizers, for instance, now can be something heartier than the tid-bits we accepted when the sun was bearing down with a vengeance.

Shrimp cocktails are received with delight wherever those who like good food gather, and though shrimps are available and good the year 'round they seem to have a special affinity for cool weather. They start any dinner correctly. The appetizer pictured today, shrimp, frozen, fresh-cooked or canned, on a bed of shredded lettuce or in small lettuce cups, and spoon over each serving a generous quantity of this sauce:

- Cocktail Sauce.
1-2 cup chili sauce
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon evaporated horseradish (soaked for 10 minutes in two teaspoons cold water)
1 teaspoon celery salt
Mix ingredients and chill thoroughly. Serve over seafood cocktails.

Why not try a new dressing for head lettuce or a bowl of salad greens?
Line salad bowl with romaine or other salad greens. Cut head lettuce in wedges. Heap wedges in center of bowl, and just before serving dress with Chiffonade dressing made in this way:

- Chiffonade Dressing.
1-2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1-4 teaspoon paprika
Mix. Beat thoroughly 1-4 cup cider vinegar and 1-2 cup olive oil or other salad oil. Add first mixture to this and then add:
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1 hard-cooked beef, chopped
1-4 cup cooked beef, chopped
Many housewives have trouble trying to vary the method of cooking vegetables. Try these:

Braised Corn.
Spread in a shallow baking pan one can of whole kernel corn, drained (Save liquid for soup!)

To rebid our hand following a suit takeout by partner of two diamonds or two hearts.

No Obligatory Rebid. However, with this same holding, in third or fourth position, our opening bid is one spade, because as opening bidder in the third or fourth position, partner having previously passed, we are not obliged to rebid if partner responds as we would have both required to do when opening in the first and second position.

Sarcasm Seldom Part of Popular Girl's Make-Up

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: I'm twenty, am told that I'm attractive and truly I am popular with both young and old. I'm a very funny person, don't like to talk, prefer to listen and when I do talk am inclined to be sarcastic. Also I am irritable with people who know me well. You know—when the homefolks ask a question I snap them off with a wisecracking answer. I am wondering how I can break myself of these habits. It would be terrible to marry a man and have him think I was hateful to live with. VIOLET.

Answer: You will never have the problem of a husband's thinking you are hateful, Violet. You'll never get a husband while you are indulging in sarcastic cracks and using your tongue for a scythe to cut the legs from under or the heads off your companions. Neither can we believe you when you say in one breath that you are popular with old and young and in the next breath admit that you seldom open your mouth but when you do, let fall scathing comments under the cover of smart cracks.

Either you break yourself of these habits or lose out completely with the young people, for while they are casual, they are courteous, and as nearly as I can make out they throw out those who can't or won't be persona grata—plain pleasant, if you know what I mean.

We don't have to talk much to get along smoothly in this life but the little we say must be pleasant or we have nobody to talk to or listen to. We don't have to be clever at repartee or quick on the uptake to make and keep friends but bet your life we have to mind our manners, butter our words, sugar our smiles when we are competing with the good conversationalists.

Every one of us thinks she's a funny person (only the egotists admit it) just a little bit different from the run of the mine. But believe me before we go far we have to admit that there are only a few Dorothy Parkers carrying in their mouths tongues so sharp that they can cut heads off without the behemoths of ones suffering pain. Generally speaking, when we try that method we discover that those we've tried to behead turn on us and punish us for the pain we've inflicted.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Dear Miss Chatfield: Could you help me make an important decision? I am a sophomore in college trying to decide upon my life's work. Since I can remember, it has been my deep wish to be a missionary of my church. But as soon as I have finished college I must help educate two sisters and a missionary's salary isn't large enough for that. I'd suggest that you make an appointment with the minister of your church, talk over your problem with him and ask him to give you his frank opinion of it. What he has to say will clarify your own thoughts and I'm very sure he will advise you to come slowly to your final decision.

Dr. and Mrs. Melton Observe Golden Wedding Anniversary

DR. AND MRS. W. F. MELTON.

The golden motif was reflected in every detail at the golden wedding anniversary last evening. Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Melton at their home on Emory drive. The hosts on this occasion were the children of the celebrants, Mr. and Mrs. Quimby Melton, of Griffin; Mrs. J. B. McNeely, of Atlanta; and Mr. and Mrs. Keller Melton, of Chicago, Ill.

The receiving line stood against a background of gold-colored garden flowers and foliage. Completing the decorations were candelabra holding burning gold tapers.

Receiving with Dr. and Mrs. Melton were their children and their grandchildren, who are Quimby Melton Jr., Fred Melton, Emily Keller McNeely and Keller F. Melton Jr.

Throughout the house arrangements of golden garden flowers were used and the dining room table was centered with similar flowers.

Mrs. Melton received her guests wearing an orchid lace gown trimmed with gold. A shoulder bouquet of talisman roses completed her costume. Mrs. Quimby Melton was gowned in old rose crepe designed along princess lines, with which she wore a shoulder bouquet of talisman roses. Mrs. McNeely and Mrs. Keller Melton wore white gowns trimmed with gold. They wore shoulder sprays of talisman roses.

Others assisting in entertaining were Mesdames Theodore H. Jack, J. Sam Guy, Goodrich C. White, E. K. Turner, William O. Speer, Earl Mauldin, J. C. Carothers, Newman Lozier, Charles D. Hurt, D. B. Sinclair, N. A. Goodyear, S. F. Tally, W. F. Lozier, M. Hutchinson, Carl Zirbes and A. M. Elton.

On Saturday the bride-elect will be honored at the party to be given by Mrs. Helen Hahn and her sister, Miss Jean Howard, at the former's home on Kemp street.

Miss Jones and her fiancé, Polk Gholston, shared honors last Saturday at an alfresco party given at their country home on Boulder Crest drive.

Picnic supper was served on tables arranged bordering the lake, and 40 guests were present.

Sharing honors with the betrothed couple on this occasion was Miss Dorothy Baker, bridesmaid in the wedding. Sam Bailey, of Miami, who will be best man, and Clarence Bailey, of Texas, who will be a groomsman in the forthcoming nuptials.

Another affair honoring the bride-elect was the bachelorette party given by Mrs. Robert E. Stevenson at the home of Mrs. F. L. Stevenson in Decatur.

Mrs. J. E. Wilson, of Whitwell Tenn., mother of the hostess, and Mrs. Floyd Everett assisted in entertaining.

Club of West End meets at the clubhouse, 1115 Gordon street, at 2:30 o'clock.

Fairburn P-T. A. meets at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium.

Capitol View P-T. A. meets at 10 o'clock at the school.

Miss Dorothy Belle Barge was maid of honor for her sister, and little Miss Betty Kalkhurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kalkhurst and niece of the groom, was the flower girl. Miss Barge wore a gown similar to those worn by the bridesmaids, and her flowers, like those carried by the other attendants, were of violet shaded asters in cascade effect. The flower girl's frock was a miniature model like those worn by the other attendants and she carried a basket of violet-shaded asters.

The bride, who is one of the most beautiful members of Atlanta society, was escorted to the altar by her father, Otis A. Barge, who gave her in marriage. They were met at the altar by Mr. Schroder and his brother, Spalding Schroder, who was best man. The bride's radiant beauty was enhanced by her portrait gown of magnolia white satin fashioned with a deep yoke of exquisite Alencon lace. The leg o'mutton sleeves were fitted into points at the wrist. A long billowing skirt which fell in graceful folds from a closely fitted waistline, swept into a three-yard train. From a coronet of Alencon lace caught to the bride's dark hair fell the illusion tulle veil in double tiers. She carried an antique lace handkerchief, 100 years old, which belongs to Mrs. Dudley Cook. Her flowers were a shower

Miss Bryant Holsenbeck To Wed Lieut. T. C. Moore Jr. on Nov. 3

Friday, November 3, has been selected by Miss Bryant Holsenbeck and Lieut. T. C. Moore Jr., U. S. M. C., of Paris Island, S. C., for the date of their marriage.

Rev. Eugene C. Few will perform the ceremony at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at Druid Hills Methodist church, where a host of friends of the bride and groom will gather to witness the impressive nuptial. Miss Ebel Beyer, who played the bride-elect's part in the wedding will render a musical program before and during the ceremony.

D. M. Holsenbeck will give his daughter in marriage, and the bride-elect's mother of honor and only attendant will be her sister, Mrs. W. T. Gilliam, of Jackson, Miss. Little Emily, Gilliam, of Jackson, will serve as flower girl. The groom-elect has chosen his brother, Hugh Campbell Moore, of White Plains, for his best man. Ushers will be D. M. Holsenbeck Jr., of Kingsport, Tenn., brother of the bride-elect; and Bernard M. Davey, of this city.

A round of parties has been planned in compliment to the attractive bride-to-be, the first of which will be the luncheon to be given Friday at the Colonial Terrace by members of the Inman Park Student's History Club, of which Miss Holsenbeck is a popular member. Mrs. J. M. Waters will act as hostess. Of interest is the fact that the honor guest, mother, the former Miss Lucile Kiser, and her grandmother, Mrs. A. J. Kiser, were members of the organization during their young ladyhood.

Misses Edith Stover and Helen Simpson will honor the bride-elect on Saturday at a bridge-tee at Davison's. Mrs. Charles Duncan, of Gainesville, and Mrs. J. L. McCord are among others planning to entertain in Miss Holsenbeck's honor, the dates and nature of their parties to be announced later.

Series of Parties Will Honor Miss Eloise, Dickey, Bride-Elect

Among those who will entertain in compliment to Miss Eloise Dickey, will be Mrs. E. T. Donnelly and Mrs. Norris Broyles, the dates and nature of their parties to be announced later.

Miss Eloise Dickey, of the Dickey family, will be an important event of October 14. Mrs. Roby Robinson will be hostess next Wednesday at her home on Twenty-sixth street honoring the bride-elect.

Invited for this affair are Miss Dickey, Misses Florence Jones, Elizabeth Groves, Helen Redding, Betty Yopp, George Dargan, Anne Pappenhauer, Virginia Willis, Bungle Fuller, Mary Louise Sciple, Bobo Spalding, Jane Osburn, Nancy Calhoun, Coribel Mason, Mary

McGaughey and Mesdames Winfield Jones, Henry Tompkins, Edward S. Gay, William Mason and Harry Bewick, mother of the bride-elect.

Miss Florence Jones, sister of the groom-elect, will be hostess at a party September 29, complimenting Miss Dickey, and on October 3 Miss Helen Redding gives a luncheon and kitchen shower at her home on Juniper street for the bride-elect.

On the wedding rehearsal, October 13, Mrs. and Mrs. Henry Tompkins will be hosts at a buffet supper at their home on West Wesley road complimenting Miss Dickey and her fiancé.

Miss Elizabeth Groves, Miss Betty Yopp and Mrs. Harold Eberle will also honor Miss Dickey.

Freckled Boy and Pig to Feel War Effects

Europe's war finds repercussions on Georgia's farms as the prices for farm products rise perceptibly. Freckle-faced little Billy Moon is shown with one of the prized pigs being produced on the farm of his father, J. S. Moon, near Snellville.

PRAYER FOR PEACE IS URGED BY MILLER

Sidney Lanier Memorial Bridge Is Officially Dedicated.

(AP)—An appeal to Georgians to utter a prayer for "peace and construction" was voiced today by Chairman W. L. Miller, of the State Highway Board.

Speaking at the dedication of the "Sidney Lanier Memorial Bridge" over the Chattahoochee river across the Habersham-White county line, he reminded of the "war and destruction" abroad.

"We need no part, we want no part, and by the help of wise statesmanship, divinely led, we will have no part in this new war in Europe," he said.

Eulogizing Lanier, the Macon-born soldier-poet, the speaker continued: "Mr. Lanier was not only among Georgia's greatest poets, but was also a soldier. He fought as a private for the Confederacy, and fought bravely and well. After that most tragic and unhappy of wars, he became a lawyer and practiced at Macon. He distinguished himself as a musician. He was a distinguished lecturer in English literature at Johns Hopkins University. Greatest of all, however, was his genius as a poet, and as such his name and fame will never die."

Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, of Macon, president-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, also spoke.

WIDOW DESCRIBES INSURANCE MURDER

Accused.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—(AP) Sobbing hysterically, the widow of a victim of Philadelphia's insurance murder ring testified today a capsule was slipped into her sleeping husband's mouth and he died in less than 24 hours.

Mrs. Rose La Vecchio Davis identified Paul Petrillo as the man who administered the capsule to her husband, ill at the time, Petrillo, described by the prosecution as a "merchant of death," is on trial charged with murder in the death of the husband, Luigi La Vecchio.

The widow, who has remarried since La Vecchio's death, also is under indictment in the slaying.

ITALIAN SHIP LINE REFUSES GERMANS

Fear of British Search Keeps 30 From Home.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Fear of British interception of Italian steamers at sea blocked the return tonight of 30 German nationals to their homeland.

The Italian line said it would deny passage to all holding passports from the Reich.

Although officials said they had received no explanation of the order from Genoa, it was obviously intended to discourage the searching of Italian vessels at sea by the British for the possible capture and internment of German nationals.

ARMY AIDE PROMOTED

LAGRANGE, Ga., Sept. 19.—Promotion of W. H. Stanley, head of the LaGrange unit of the Salvation army, from the rank of adjutant to that of major has been announced by national headquarters. The promotion cliniques a 20-year period of service in the army which began in Kingston, N. C., after Mr. Stanley had completed his training at the New York City Training College in 1920. He assumed duties with the local post in June, 1938, coming from Burlington, N. C.

ATLANTA SPOT COTTON.

Atlanta spot cotton closed steady, middling 9.47.

AVERAGE PRICE.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The average price of middling cotton today at ten southern spot markets was unchanged at 8.89 cents a pound.

The average price for the past 30 market days was 9.01 cents a pound.

Best values were made after Chancellor Hitler's speech. There was some aggressive outside buying and covering on the theory that the address offered no immediate prospect for peace.

The flurry of demand was given impetus by a renewed upsurge in securities and a sharp rally in wheat.

Futures were lower at the start, but pressure subsided after the opening call and prices strengthened with the rise in securities until the move attracted southern selling and realizing.

Liverpool futures declined 10 to 16 points in an active but thin market. Trade in North Street textiles was quiet but prices held steady at recently advanced levels.

Today's exports were 4,216 bales, bringing the season's to date to 351,801. Port receipts 48,900; port stocks 2,463,203.

COTTON TRADING MIXED IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19.—(AP) Trading was mixed in cotton futures here today with trade and investment buying absorbing liquidation and hedge selling. Closing prices were steady but unchanged to 5 points higher.

Money Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The so-called "free" British pound sterling continued its erratic movement today, rebounding sharply at the head of a general upturn in European currencies in terms of the dollar.

Dealers in the "free" pound, government demand and supply conditions, again appear to be relatively thin, with the Bank of England offering to "defend" the pound at $4.48 and British authorities offering to "defend" the pound at $4.48.

The free rate bounced up to $4.48, an overnight rise of nearly 12 cents, but receded later at $4.47. The pound's value in a normal market was quoted 20 of a cent higher, the Canadian dollar 12 of a cent up and the French franc 1 of a cent higher. The Netherlands guilder and the Swiss franc also improved.

Final rates follow: Great Britain 100 shillings, others in cents: Great Britain 100 shillings, 60.48; Canada 100 shillings, 3.91; France 100 francs, 20.48; Germany 100 marks, 2.48; Italy 100 lire, 2.48; Japan 100 yen, 1.48; Netherlands 100 guilders, 1.48; Poland 100 zlotys, 1.48; Portugal 100 escudos, 1.48; Sweden 100 kronor, 1.48; Switzerland 100 francs, 1.48; United States 100 dollars, 1.48.

Bar silver 38 1/2, up 1/4 cents.
